FIGHTING WORDS

TORONTO (CP) — A Social Credit candidate in Greenwood riding for the Oct. 30 federal election is anxious for a campaign fight — literally.

George Leslie, who says he once was the Maritimes heavyweight boxing champion, would like to enter the ring against Jean Marchand, minister of regional economic expansion.

Leslie, who quoted the minister as having described Quebec Social Crediters as "psychiatric cases," said he sent Marchand a letter challenging him to a fist fight.

The letter said Marchand's comment "constitutes a foul, vicious and malicious insult and I demand satisfaction in the approved fashion of my honored Scottish forefathers."

New Mine Firms in B.C. 51% Canadian Soon

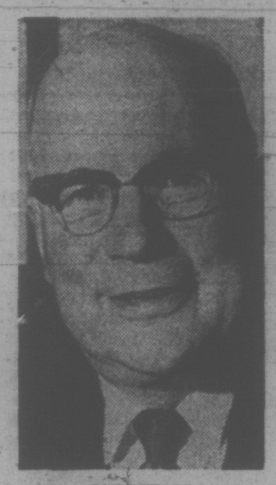

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Any mining company starting a new venture in British Columbia will have to be at least 51% Canadian-owned, Mines Minister Leo Nimsick told The Times Tuesday.

The day of foreign companies coming into the province to dig ore and ship it out of the country is over, he stressed.

Existing companies need not fear any immediate move by the provincial government to take them over, but he served warning that the time will come when the provincial government will decide to assume at least 50 per cent of all mining companies. But that day is far in the future, he said.

And, even when that day does come, American or Japanese companies which started the B.C. operations will still be able to retain up to 49% of them.

NIMSICK
. . . warning served

But all that is in the future.

Today the new mining policy is:

—All new mining companies starting business in B.C. must be over 50 per cent Canadian owned.

—The proposed smelter which Cominco Ltd. hopes to build at Kimberley may still be constructed. If it can be proved to be a pollution-free operation, it may get the blessing of the provincial government. An announcement will come later.

—The proposed smelter in the Cariboo to be constructed by a consortium of companies has not got a prayer. It is based upon a tall stack dispersing sulphur dioxide fumes into the air and Nimsick said it could never be approved on that basis.

—The era of dividing the province up into clean air areas and dirty air zones is over. No mine venture will be permitted to start up anywhere in the province if it contributes to pollution. "The whole province has become a clean air zone," he said.

—The mining companies operating in B.C. have been invited to submit proposals to Nimsick on how a system of royalties may be devised to give the provincial treasury a share in non-renewable resources exported from B.C.

"The era of the free ride is over in this province. In the past, the ore has been taken out of the ground with no thought of future generations," he said.

"Now we must plan the depletion of our non-renewable resources with an eye to the future.

"We must change the thinking of mining men in this province. Mining is a one-shot resource. Even trees can be replanted but you can not replace ore once it has been mined."

Without planning, he said, many mining towns in the province could join the ranks of ghost towns where companies have moved in, taken the cream and left.

The two new priorities in mining are to see that it produces as many jobs as possible and that there is a reasonable return to the people of the province in the form of royalties.

—He said the Kootenay and Elk Railway can forget any plans it had to export coal from British Columbia through the United States rather than using Canadian lines to Roberts Bank.

B.C. LOTTERY . . . IN TIME

Premier Barrett indicated Tuesday night his government will go ahead with plans for a provincial lottery system, when it has the time.

Barrett, speaking on a New Westminster radio program, said the lottery will be introduced "as soon as we can have a good go."

"But we've got an awful lot of legislation on our plate at this point . . . I don't want to give a specific date and disappoint anybody," he said.

Last week Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said B.C. is in the process of studying the lottery systems in operation in some of the Prairie provinces and was considering instituting one in this province.

PM Promises Recreation 'Goodies'

Times News Services

SHAWINIGAN, Que. — Prime Minister Truudeau promised Canadians Tuesday a leisure and recreation program "that will leave you breathless."

He gave no details of the program but said the Liberal government would have "goodies — candies — to announce in the next week or two, certainly before Oct. 30."

He said, "I guarantee that it will leave you breathless."

Trudeau was speaking at a Liberal party meeting which renominated Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chetien in the Oct. 30 federal election.

Trudeau made one other stop during the first day of his current low-key, two-day tour of the province, appearing on an open-line radio show in Trois-Rivieres, where he reaffirmed his belief in the abolition of capital punishment and said he would probably vote to continue the ban against hanging when the matter comes up in the Commons later this year.

While Trudeau concentrated on Quebec voters, Conservative leader Robert Stanfied is in Toronto where he pledged Tuesday that a Conservative government would offer tax incentives to individuals investing in risky Canadian corporations.

Stanfield disclosed for the first time on a television interview this aspect of his party's program for increasing Canadian investment in Canadian enterprises.

He was discussing the problem of foreign ownership of Canadian companies and what incentives should be offered to small businessmen similar to those now offered large corporations in Canada.

"I don't see why we can't give some tax credits, for example, up to a certain amount a year for money that's invested in risk situations," the Conservative leader declared.

"I think this could develop quite a pool of venture capital which would be available for small businessmen," he added.

Bullets Miss Ulster's Craig

BELFAST (UPI) — A man and a woman in a speeding car fired three shots today at a car carrying William Craig, leader of Northern Ireland's militant right-wing Ulster Vanguard Movement, in an apparent assassination attempt. He escaped injury but said he was badly shaken.

Two other men were found shot to death in apparently motiveless murders by what police called "back street assassins" and a bomb exploded outside a crowded bar in a Roman Catholic sector of Belfast, wounding 30 persons. The two murdered men were the 66th and 67th victims of the gang believed to kill for thrills.

The shaken Craig told police he was driving on a small country lane near Lisburn, eight miles south of Belfast, when a car behind him sped up to pass. The dark car, driven by a man with a woman in the passenger's seat, pulled level.

Then, Craig said, a gun was pushed through the window and opened fire. Craig swerved and stopped. The attackers' car sped away.

Craig told newsmen in Lisburn's police station that the first two shots did not fully register with him.

"It was only on the last shot that I was conscious that the shooting was at me," he said. "It was only confirmed a short distance up the road when I saw the bullet holes."

Police Losing Drug Battle

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police said Tuesday that while there are more drug arrests than ever before, the police are fighting a losing battle against the illicit drug trade in Vancouver.

They warned that more and more pot smokers are moving up the ladder through LSD, MDA and other soft drugs to heroin.

Figures just released show that in the first nine months of 1971 there were 258 heroin possession charges and 93 trafficking charges.

In the corresponding period for 1972, 617 persons were charged with possession of heroin and 151 with trafficking.

An average of 50 persons appears each day in provincial court on charges ranging from possession of drugs to trafficking. The report says a few years ago one provincial court session a week was held to handle the handful of drug cases.

Police officers point to the judicial system as a key culprit. They attack the new bail reform system and complain that the courts are handing out lenient sentences.

"We can't keep the drug pedlars off the streets," complained one officer. "No sooner do we bring them in than they are released."

In the past two months, a special squad of eight officers has been concentrating on soft drug enforcement to free veteran drug squad police to crack down on the heroin trade.

Principals' Power Urged

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

A management consultant's report released today says the bureaucracy of Greater Victoria School Board is not overstaffed but it recommends streamlining the operation and giving more responsibility in finance and hiring to principals.

School board chairman Allan McKinnon said the board had given the go-ahead for the recommended job rescheduling and had referred other recommendations for consideration.

McKinnon noted that although he had been voted to office on a platform of reducing school board bureaucracy, staff reductions necessitated by financial constraints and effected more than a year before the report was commissioned had cut some 22 positions in the administration, with an annual reduction in direct salaries of $250,000.

He said the administrative streamlining would not reduce school costs.

The $13,500 report, drawn up by Price, Waterhouse Associates of Vancouver, created a set of new jobs and job descriptions for most board executives.

One of the major changes relieves the secretary-treasurer of his business responsibilities and creates a director of business.

School construction and maintenance will be handled by a director of school support and instruction will be divided betwen an administration and a curriculum chief.

Under a system of "responsibility accounting," which would extend throughout the senior levels, school principals would be made responsible for information and maintenance of their own school budgets.

Norman Alban, spokesman for Price, Waterhouse, said responsibility accounting was "a method of informing those responsible for various operations."

Since schools account for 90 per cent of the board's $26 million annual budget this means the principal will be made responsible for setting school budgets, he said.

McKinnon said a closed board meeting Tuesday night balked at the report's suggestion that pay of the top 20 officials should be scaled and defined.

Gunman Kills 3

ANGOULEME, France (AP) — A man opened fire with a carbine in a crowded department store today, killing three children and seriously wounding several employees.

The gunman was identified by employees as a man who had been wandering through the store for several days, buying nothing and laughing without reason.

He was disarmed by a policeman who happened to be in the store.

Canadian, U.S. Drug Prices 'The Highest'

By DAVE ABLETT
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Giant pharmaceutical companies are charging U.S. and Canadian druggists three and four times as much as druggists elsewhere for the same amount of the same drug.

The huge differences are revealed in a nine-country survey of 20 widely used drugs, including antibiotics, contraceptives, antihistamines and tranquilizers.

The druggists' cost is a major factor in the price eventually paid by someone who walks into a drugstore with a prescription.

According to the survey, Swedish druggists, for example, mark up their pharmaceuticals an average of 45.3 per cent.

The survey, inserted in the U.S. Congressional Record by Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin to support a drug-price control bill, was prepared by two U.S. government researchers, Edmond Jacoby and Dennis Hefner.

Jacoby and Hefner concluded cautiously that the drug price differences between various contries are "significant."

Some of the differences they said, may be due to labor costs, market size and other economic factors.

But they added: "General knowledge of the total problem suggests that it would be unwise to assume that price discrimination exercised by drug producers is a minor factor."

The survey was based on price lists from 1968, 1969 and 1970 — just as a worldwide inflationary surge was beginning.

To get a proper comparison, Jacoby and Hefner put everything in terms of the U.S. dollar price for 100 tablets or capsules of the 20 drugs.

The same company or a licensee sells each drug in the nine countries.

The 20 drugs were chosen on the basis of importance in the U.S. drug markets — all were among the 50 most prescribed drugs in the U.S.

While the survey was main ly aimed at showing the high prices U.S. druggists paid, the survey also showed that Candian druggists — and as a result Canadian consumers — were not much better off.

Among the more striking findings about costs to Canadian druggists:

Canadian druggists paid $10.69 to Ely Lilly company for V-Cillin-K, an antibiotic. Lilly sold the same amount to British druggists for $2.40 under the same brand name.

Canadian druggists paid $3.06 to Hoffman-Laroche for Gantrisin, a sulfonamide. The New Zealand price, the lowest among the nine countries, was $1.11.

Canadian druggists paid $5.29 to Lilly for an analgesic, Propoxyphene HCL, sold in Canada as Darvon.

New Zealand druggists paid $1.66 for the same analgesic, known there as Doloxene.

Canadian druggists' costs on another antibiotic, demethylchlortetracycline HCL, sold by Lederle as Declomycin, was $16.00.

In New Zealand, the Lederle price for Ledermycin — the same thing — was $3.87.

In one of the 20 cases was the Canadian price among the lowest — in only one case was the Canadian price as low as fourth among the nine.

In 12 of the 20 cases, Canada had the second-highest price, usually after the United States, whose druggists paid the most in 12 out of 20 cases.

Canada had the highest price in three cases, and the third-highest in four cases.

Ireland, New Zealand and Britian had the lowest prices.

The high Canadian and U.S. prices were also reflected in the average price of the 20 drugs surveyed.

The average paid by the U.S. druggist was $9.68. Canadian druggists paid $8.71.

He said that "an amazing

Saanich Considers Second Rink

Saanich indoor recreation committee Tuesday recommended a second public ice rink be provided to accommodate an over-flow demand for hockey icetime.

Aldermen voted unanimously to ask council to put a borrowing bylaw before ratepayers at the municipal election Dec. 9.

Ald. Alan Newberry suggested it was not the time to recommend a location for a new rink, but noted surveys of municipal requirements and population trends indicate the Gordon Head district.

Secretary Bruce Naylor said it may be necessary to "kick out" the younger boys participating in the minor hockey program in order to make room on the ice for those in the more critical mid-adolescent group.

Association registrar Art Moysychyn said the organization felt it was necessary to keep the juvenile players interested and active, to "keep them in sports and out of courts."

Recreation administrator Bill Young agreed with the need for more icetime and that anither ice surface should be provided with just the "bare bones" of a hockey rink.

Ald. William Noel said he favored an ice surface with limited seating capacity, but not another full-scale arena at this time.

The association said 157 boys are being denied organized icetime this season, and that four more hours a week would be needed to fit them into the minor hockey system.

Young said there was a possibility of granting the association one more hour per week, in addition to the two hours made available at the start of the season. This is time no longer needed by Royal Roads Service College which is using Juan de Fuca arena.

The association said it uses a total of 38 hours a week for some 750 boys registered in the various leagues, compared with about 25 hours and 600 boys in Victoria.

Pearkes arena is used from 5 a.m. to 2 a.m. Sunday through Thursday and 24 hours each Friday and Saturday.

Some of the beginners in the seven to 11-year-old bracket must use the ice at 5:30 a.m. to get their practice time in.

In a separate report, the recreation administrator said since Jan. 1 36,475 persons had used the arena for public skating and 120 boys had been registered in three weeks of hockey schools in the summer.

Since the opening in 1968 a total of 243,330 skaters have used Pearkes arena.

In other community recreation services, registration shows there have been 12,867 weekday golfers at Cedar Hill course and 4,375 weekend players, and 35,636 swimmers at Lambrick pool since the beginning of the year.

. . . MINES

He said there are as many jobs created in transport as there are in the mining for every ton of coal produced. These jobs must be protected by seeing that coal is exported along Canadian lines, he said.

—A copper smelter could be constructed on Vancouver Island if it were pollution free "and there is some remarkable progress being made in that direction right now." Pollution free smelters are possible now and there was no reason why one couldn't be constructed in the mining area at the north of the island (Port Hardy) if the need was there.

—Use of coal for thermal plants in British Columbia has the full support of the mines minister.

"There is so much cheap coal in this province that could be put to good use and I am confident the thermal plant could produce power without a lot of dirty smoke. I am sure they can solve that problem."

He said that while the low-quality coal is plentiful and worth only about $3 a ton, it is worth about $27 ton in terms of the amount of electricity that can be produced from it.

The British Columbia Energy Board report urged that thermal production rather than harness large new rivers or use natural gas in thermal plants. This fits in with the philosophy of the new mines minister.

(The energy board also urged future use of nuclear power but Premier Dave Barrett has opposed this.)

Nimsick, 64, admits to being a little surprised by the NDP sweep of the province but he is delighted that theories he has been advocating for years will at the last get tested.

Although his ideas have mellowed with the times, he is determined people and the environment be the main considerations in the economic development of the prorive.

Born in B.C., he became a socialist in the early depression years and claims the distinction of setting up the first CCF association in Canada.

He was looking around for a name for his group and read about the formation of the CCF in Calgary in 1932 and immediately adopted the name.

He became an alderman in Rossland and then was elected MLA in 1949. He has served in the legislature ever since.

He was a founding member of the Trail Local 480 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Union. He retired from his job at Cominco four years ago.

"I believe that government works better by co-operation than by coercion," he said.

"For example I think the mining companies would rather participate in planning how they can return a larger share to the provincial treasury.

"I may be naive but I think they will want to co-operate with me on this."

In any case, the task has to be done one way or the other. Premier Barrett has instructed him to come up with a royalty schedule by the start of the January session of the legislation.

"I would much rather see this done by the mining companies themselves" Nimsick said.

Joint Talks On Complex

Sidney council has asked Central Saanich and North Saanich councils to discuss building a recreation complex to serve the Saanich Peninsula on a tri-municipal basis.

Mayor Stan Dear said this week that if councils could agree on a location and cost-sharing arrangement, the complex would become a reality.

First reaction from North and Central Saanich was favorable on Monday with both councils agreeing to meet for discussion purposes.

Ald. Ted Clayards, Central Saanich declared it was time the Peninsula people stopped "free-loading" on recreation facilities in Saanich and Victoria.

. . . ELECTION

"I want the Canadian businessmen, the small fellow, the big fellow and the medium-sized fellow, to be able to compete," Stanfield said.

Bulloch then asked him about the difficulties of small businessmen in Canada today in raising risk capital.

"Small businessmen getting equity capital — there's a problem," Stanfield agreed. "There is no question about that."

He said the small businessmen wanting to start new ventures shouldn't expect someone else to put up all the capital required, since they must have a substantial investment in the project to ensure they won't "throw up their hands" and leave it to someone else to rescue in times of difficulty.

Earlier the Conservative leader refined slightly his publicly-expressed position on price and wage controls, pledging that as prime minister he would impose them if necessary to stop the growth of an "inflationary psychology" among Canadians.

Stanfield explained his views in a taped interview shown in Edmonton.

Meanwhile in Montreal, New Democratic Party leader David Lewis said an NDP government would bring in firmer laws to improve the labor situation for women.

Speaking on an open-line radio show, Lewis said he favors a comprehensive network of daycare centres and salaries for housewives "because we have to find ways to make women more independent of men."

"Our laws favor men and employers favor men," he said.

"Even when laws are egalitarian, many employers find a way of getting around them by for example, creating different job classifications."

Asked to elaborate on the question of salaries for housewives, he told a caller he was talking about a social goal for which the program had not been worked out.

During the 75-minute show on the French-language station, five callers asked the NDP leader to defend his stand that it would take more than a provincial election for Quebec to secede.

When a caller asked why all federal leaders are afraid of the Parti Quebecois, Lewis replied that he is not afraid.

He said he hoped "with all his heart" Quebec would not choose separatism.

Also in Montreal Social Credit leader Real Caouette says he would move to Vancouver if Quebec separated from the rest of Canada.

Caouette said Wednesday that any clear, democratic decision by Quebecers to separate from Canada would have to be respected.

However, he would not remain in a separate Quebec but would settle in Vancouver, a city that has always attracted him.

Caouette said Claude Wagner, Quebec campaign leader for the Progressive Conservatives, is singing one song to Quebecers while Conservative leader Robert Stanfield has a different tune for Western Canada.

He said the leader of the Conservatives' Quebec campaign would respect a democratic vote by Quebecers to separate. This contradicted PC policy.

Wagner should conform to the Conservative party line because it is evident that Mr. Stanfield would never allow Quebecers the right to self-determination.

In fact, Stanfield was prepared to call a nationwide referendum to stop Quebec from separating.

example" of the effect of patent monopolies was disclosed in Canada last year during licensing proceedings on Valium and Librium, products of the Swiss company, Hoffman-Laroche, which dominates the tranquillizer field.

"During the hearings in Canada," Nelson said, "It was made clear that Roche could make Valium in its raw form at $87 per kilo (2.2 pounds).

"Roche's selling price of the final dosage form in Canada was $11,000 per kilo, or about 13,000 per cent of the price of raw materials."

According to the survey, Valium was sold to Canadian druggists for $6.01 for 100 tablest, compared to $2.46 in Ireland.

The U.S. price, the only one higher than the Canadian price, was $8.03.

Nelson also told the Senate of a 1965 case in which the U.S. licensee for a French company, Rhone-Poulenc, charged $32.62 a thousand for tablets to the U.S. defence department.

The Canadian licensee sold the same quantity of the same drug to Canada's department of veteran's affiars for $2.62 per thousand.

"When this startling 12-to-1 discrepancy was first brought to the attention of the department of defence," Nelson said: "The U.S. government agency attempted to secure the product from the Canadian firm, but that firm's licensing agreement with the patent owner Rhone-Poulenc restricted its sales to Canadian customers only.

the weather

The broad ridge of high pressure centred just southwest of the Charlottes and responsible for the clear and cool weather gives strong indication of persisting across most of the province for the next two days.

The changes to occur will be in the north coast as an intense low pressure centre moves into the northern Gulf of Alaska later today. This will spread increasing winds into much of the north coast tonight with some rain also expected in the northern half. Temperatures to remain in the normal to cool range.

MEANING CHANGED

A typographical error in the Oct. 3 issue of the Times inadvertantly changed the meaning of Esquimalt-Liberal candidate's Louis Lindholm's speech to his audience at the George Pearkes Arena Monday night.

The incorrect sentence read: Crime should "not" be treated as a game, to told the audience, and Canada should "now" allow its laws to be weighed in favor of the criminal.

It should have read: Crime should not be treated as a game, he told the audience, and Canada should "not" allow its laws to be weighed in favor of the criminal.

Lindholm emphasized today that he is against permissiveness in criminal law.

B.C. RAIL CHARGED OVER SPAWN SLIDES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Canada said Tuesday that charges are being laid by the fisheries service against British Columbia Railway following two slides in spring (chinook) salmon spawning areas in northwestern B.C. last week.

The slides temporarily blocked the Bear River, about 240 miles northwest of Prince George, leaving silt deposits and debris on the spawning grounds.

A news release from the Vancouver office of Environment Minister Jack Davis said "slides were triggered by roadbed construction alongside the river."

The provincially-owned railway is constructing an extension of its line to Dease Lake and it goes along the river.

Fisheries service staff Saturday flew into the area to check any slide and damage to the fishery, the release said.

It also said it was the first charge laid against a provincial corporation under amendments to the Fisheries Act last fall allowing such charges against government corporations.

Teachers Drop Suit

Their action had frozen $1,116,000 in funds for the duration of the Aug. 30 provincial election campaign.

"We felt the teachers' federation should not be involved in political action. We prevented them from getting involved, and thus we accomplished our objective," said Barker, of 804 Foul Bay.

The levy money, representing one day's pay from each of the B.C.T.F.'s 23,500 members, was to have been used for political action aimed at defeating the Social Credit government. Barker and Hall were granted an injunction in the B.C. Supreme Court last June which froze the funds.

After the injunction was granted, a teachers' political action committee was set up to collect and distribute voluntary contributions from teachers and others.

"No punitive action will be taken by the federation against teachers who did not pay the levy, and all the money will be repaid so we're not taking the matter any further," Barker said.

He said obtaining the injunction and subsequent repayment was a victory on behalf of a great number of teachers who feel political and religious convictions should be personal matters, and not something to be decided by a professional organization."

Barker said he joined the Social Credit League last spring "after 19 years in teaching without being involved with politics."

"I felt the federation should not be involved in politics, and my way of stopping it was to join the Social Credit League and launch the lawsuit," he said.

Barker said he organized the campaign of Waldo Skillings and Newell Morrison, Social Credit candidates in Victoria. He said he would not himself be seeking office in provincial politics or in the BCTF in the immediate future.

In the suit which has now been dropped, Barker and Hall claimed the political levy violated the federation's constitution and was illegal under the B.C. Societies Act. They also sought an injunction stopping the federation from suspending members who didn't pay the levy.

'Police State' Tactics Used

A Victoria Travel agent who booked passengers on a Vancouver-London charter flight which was cancelled Monday night said today air transport inspectors' methods resembled tactics of a "police state."

Tom Woodward, owner of the Four Seasons Travel Agency, was referring to a Dan Air flight arranged for members of the Canadian Ski Bob Association which was cancelled by federal authorities.

The flight which was to have left Vancouver International Airport at midnight, was cancelled after Canadian air transport inspectors found that about half of the 189 passengers were not legitimate members of the charter group.

Sources indicate that none of the 30 scheduled passengers from Victoria were illegal passengers booked through capital city charter flight agents.

Woodward described the charter flight regulations as "ludicrous."

"The regulation that they have to be members makes interested passengers obliged to join societies they are not the least bit interested in," he said, adding officials should realize that 52 per cent of Canadian population fly charter.

He said if there were "30 angry Victorians" because of the cancellation then 30 angry letters should be written to their MLAs.

The letters might start some action and get existing charter laws requiring club membership changed.

He quoted the tale of one passenger: As the 183 passengers entered the departure lounge, they were told to line up in two's and each individual was questioned by two Transport Commission inspectors.

Thirty passengers were allowed to board the Boeing 707 jetliner, but 20 minutes later they were ordered off the aircraft and the flight was cancelled.

Woodward said he was appalled at the episode which "resembled tactics of a police state."

Bryan Yirush, regional sales manager for Dan Air, commented the company hated to cancel the flight but didn't wish to lose its licence.

He said the passengers were supposed to be members of the Canadian Ski Bob Association, or direct relatives of members, and inspectors said half of the passenger list did not qualify.

Mrs. Joy Wilson, office manager for Charter Flight Consultants in Victoria which booked about 25 of the passengers said she had been told all of the Victorians aboard were legitimate members.

She said today that as far as she knew most of the travellers had left the country on scheduled airlines.

The director of Burritt Travel Ltd., in Victoria Ken Hibbert commented his firm was not responsible for any of the cancelled flight's passengers.

Another factor in the cancellation according to a Canadian Transport Commission spokesman is many passengers only had one-way tickets even though they held so called return tickets.

He said passengers had admitted on questioning by inspectors that they were just returning overseas.

Socred Choice 'Soon'

Soviet Credit MLA Frank Richter said today he expects former premier Bennett to name "within a day or two" a Socred house leader for this month's special session of the legislature.

Richter, former mines minister, said it is "accepted practice" for the official leader of the Opposition, who he said is still Bennett, to designate another MLA to sit as house leader if he is unable to attend the session.

Richter said Bennett is still on vacation.

"The prerogative of naming a house leader is not changed from past policy," Richter said.

"There will be an appointment whether the leader of the opposition is here or not. Mr. Bennett will indicate who he wants. There is no question about that."

Richter said there is a possibility Bennett may be back himself before the special session starts Oct. 17.

Manpower to Stress Training, New Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey said today that $125 million placed at his department's disposal to be divided between two continued government programs will put more emphasis on job creation and on-the-job training.

Mackasey said $85 million will be used to support Local Initiative Programs, and $40 million will pay for on-the-job training.

Both amounts were announced earlier.

Last year, the initial amounts provided to the two programs totalled $120 million, with $100 million to L.I.P. and the remainder to the training program.

The cutback from $100 million to $85 million for the L.I.P. plan was nominal, Mackasey said at a news conference.

L.I.P. projects with a total cost of more than $200,000 will not be considered, Mackasey said. "There will be more projects of a smaller nature."

The maximum limit per project last year was $500,000.

He estimated that between 40,000 and 45,000 jobs will be created by the new L.I.P. plan.

The amount announced came as no surprise as Mackasey said last month that a new L.I.P. program and the federal on-the-job training plan would be financed by funds "equal to the initial amount we started with for the two programs last year."

L.I.P. received $100 million last year and the on-the-job plan $20 million initially in 1971.

Last week Mackasey said an on-the-job training program would receive $40 million this winter.

Last year L.I.P. began with $100 million and was expanded later with $50 million last January, $30 million in May and $15 million in September.

The $15 million in September was to allow 750 projects to be carried over until the end of November.

Mackasey said in a news release today that deadlines for the new L.I.P. applications will be Dec. 31, 1972. Application forms and detailed criteria by which plans will be evaluated are available at Canada Manpower centres.

Accused 'Seemed Dazed,' Reporter Tells Court

The accident at Fort and Oak Bay killed Ronald Morriss, 21, of 2720 Foul Bay. Five others, including Trueman, were injured.

The witness, Barbara McLintock, a Daily Colonist reporter, testified she was at Garden City Ambulance offices early on the morning of March 5 when the call came in on the crashh.

She said she travelled to the accident scene with an ambulance crew and saw Trueman on the street shortly after the 1 a.m. crash.

"He was pale ... very dazed, shocked, I would say, and bleeding from the lower part of his face," Miss McLintock said.

The reporter had been asked earlier in the day to appear as a witness by Prosecutor Brain Smith.

Witnesses normally are excluded from the courtroom during proceedings other than their own testimony, but Miss McLintock, covering the trial for her newspaper, had sat through Monday's opening session of the trial.

Mr. Justice Peter Donald Seaton told the jury of 10 men and two women that the reporter's presence Monday had not detracted from the truth of her evidence.

Seaton said evidence from such a witness would not necessarily be colored through dishonesty, but could be shaded by the "power of suggestion" after listening to testimony from other witnesses.

In other evidence, Victoria Police Constable Douglas Richardson said he had conducted a breath test on the accused less than two hours after the crash.

Richardson said he had "seen higher readings before" in blood-alcohol tests, but that in his opinion the condition of the accused in the officer's post-accident investigation had warranted a test.

Richardson said Trueman had told him after blowing into the breath test machine that he was impaired "and I know it."

The trial continued today.

Welfare Plan Revived

A plan to co-ordinate all government-supported welfare services in the Capital Region which was rejected last year by then Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi, is being revived by the Capital Regional board.

Chairman of the board, Hugh Curtis, said today a letter had been sent to the new minister Norman Levi, requesting an exploratory session and discussion of the tabled proposal.

"The proposal remains board policy," Curtis said, "so now we're just re-activating the subject under a new minister."

The proposal, which was originally drawn up for the board by the Community Council of Victoria, calls for integration of all community and social services in the capital region.

Board director Edith Gunning described the plan at the time, as a move to humanize welfare services by elimination buck-passing and bureaucracy.

The new service would hope to end the "confusing and fragmented pattern" of social services, she said, by creating a new department of the Capital Regional District under a director.

Spokesman for Levi's office said today he had received the letter last week and as yet had not given the board a reply.

Session Goes Ahead

An application by Victoria Cablevision Ltd. for a rate increase was heard today by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission in Edmonton, despite formal requests by Victoria city council and Victoria MP David Groos that the hearing be adjourned and held in Victoria. (Earlier story on Page 11.)

Groos said in a telephone interview from Edmonton that the commission members closely questioned the counsel for the applicant about the company's financial status.

Judging by the line of questioning it was "by no means certain the CRTC would grant the application," Groos said.

Behind the Waterfront

Mr. Allan Edwards, an architectural consultant with an international reputation, used a key word yesterday in his criticism of the Reid highrise plan for the Inner Harbor, with its two curved sections rising from a plaza. The word is incompatibility. The 14 and 11-storey towers at the water's edge will not fit the environment of the Inner Harbor, particularly as a major consideration in developing the Wharf Street area is to preserve the strong Old Town flavor inherent in many of the original Victoria buildings in the area.

What might be admissible in some cities, as Mr. Edwards points out, is not necessarily a good choice in every city. And the Reid importation, whatever attractions it might have in some locations, is clearly out of keeping with the site and the atmosphere of Victoria's priceless harbor.

Whatever may be thought of Mr. Edwards' proposal for a 12-storey hotel tower with lower wings, of materials that would blend with the surroundings, and set well back from the water, there would certainly be agreement on the picturesque shoreline scene which he proposes as one way in which to gain the most from the location.

The waterfront, with promenades and other pedestrian facilities, would present a succession of small restaurants, shops, viewing points, dwelling places and other structures, designed with a variety and quality that would attract people with their livable look, rather than deter them with soul-quenching height and mass.

It is unfortunate that it is no doubt too late for the present process to be halted and some escape to be found from the fate which developers, city councils and inexperience have created for Victoria. The decision, with its implications for the whole city environment as well as for the actual site, was of a magnitude too great for unassisted laymen's judgment. What Mr. Edwards, from his long experience of designing in many parts of the world, calls "an absolutely disastrous decision," has been made.

It was not the first, and it may not be the last. Our only hope is, if we are stuck with it, that present and future councils may have learned the lesson of what not to do, even if what should be done is still a matter for trained experts.

"... never underestimate the public's intelligence ... they have at least the mind of a 10-year-old ..."

Confrontation and a New Ditch

Once more a confrontation looms between Panama and the United States over the canal which bisects the continents of the western hemisphere. Whether it will reach the ugly proportions of the 1964 incidents remains to be seen, but the recurrence of these disputes over a transport link between two oceans and the shortcut used by international shipping should promote fresh talk of a new cut.

From time to time studies have been made of alternative locations to the Big Ditch. Feasibility surveys have been undertaken and, in some instances, proposals have been advanced for a sea-level crossing of the isthmus which would eliminate some of the problems of locks. Since excavations for such a channel have been viewed as nuclear blasting projects — and nuclear blasting has attained its unenviable reputation — the discussions have been muted in recent times.

Perhaps the time has arrived for a renewal of studies and discussions which would view the undertaking as an international co-operative work under the control of the United Nations. The world body, representing all countries, would be in a preferred position to avoid nationalist friction between the country through which the canal would be cut and any single sponsoring nation.

An essential would be adequate compensation to the country involved for its real estate. After that, internationalism should be the keynote. Egypt, with the Suez, and occasionally Panama, have both shown the harmful conflict which foreign ownership and local sovereignty can cause in such zones.

Scared Out of Teaching

UBC Dean Neville Scarfe's forecast of a teacher shortage within the next few years emphasizes some of the problems in store for education in British Columbia, but it can scarcely have much effect on the law of supply and demand.

Teachers, many of them highly qualified, are in surplus at present (a recent BCTF report indicated between 400 and 500 had been dropped from lower mainland payrolls at the beginning of September). And these reports of surpluses have, according to the dean, scared off a number of students who presumably had intended to enter teacher training courses. The logic of this development is clear: Why spend time and money training to be a teacher when desirable jobs are growing scarcer, if they are available at all, for a number of aspirants.

The situation, common in western Canada, might be improved if the long-desired shift could be made to smaller classes. Under existing conditions, however, school boards find the salary bills of teachers straining their resources. In many cases they feel they cannot afford to create more jobs — and frequently, according to recent report, they have been filling essential posts with less qualified — and hence less expensive — members of the profession.

As scales stand at present, teachers enjoy above average earning opportunities, when they have a job. But the costs cut down on the volume of hiring. Potential teacher trainees recognize the obvious: the prospect of high pay becomes less than attractive when it depends on jobs that, for the time being at least, are in short supply.

WILLIAM V. SHANNON

Fissures in the Watergate

WASHINGTON — It is now clear that Republican denials of responsibility for the sinister Watergate espionage case issued from the White House down have been a tissue of lies.

The administration and its political apparatus, the Committee to Re-elect the President, began by asserting that they had no connection with the men arrested last June for breaking into the Democratic National Committee headquarters in the Watergate apartment complex. When multiple connections began to appear, it was then said that no one in "senior status" on the committee was involved. Next, President Nixon and his subordinates began carefully to say that no one "presently employed" in the administration was a participant.

Seven Indicted

Seven men, including two former White House aides, have now been indicted for their part in the Watergate case. Moreover, the press has diligently pieced together most of the story. Contrary to both the early and the later denials, a key White House assistant and several top officials of the Committee to Re-elect the President appear to have known about the wiretapping and electronic eavesdropping of the Democratic headquarters and the theft and copying of Democratic documents.

This espionage operation was financed out of a special fund which the General Accounting Office estimated at $350,000 but which may at times have contained twice that amount. This money was under the control of the principal assistants to John N. Mitchell, the former attorney-general who was the Nixon campaign manager when the Watergate case broke. There was a list of 15 persons who had the right to draw money from this secret fund earmarked for "sensitive projects," most of these persons are still working in the Nixon campaign organization.

Alfred Baldwin, an ex-FBI agent who was hired as one of the guards for Martha Mitchell, the wife of the former attorney-general, reportedly told the grand jury that he was later transferred to the monitoring of conversations on the tapped phones of the Democratic National Committee.

According to Baldwin, memos and transcripts of these wiretapped conversations were sent to the White House and to senior officials in the Nixon campaign organization by James W. McCord Jr.,

RICHARD KLEINDIENST
... I don't know

the former security co-ordinator for the Committee to Re-elect the President who is one of the seven men indicted.

It further develops that in the week following the arrests at the Watergate on June 17, two senior officials of the Committee to Re-elect the President — Robert C. Mardian, a former assistant attorney-general and now the committee's political co-ordinator, and Frederick La Rue, a former counsel to President Nixon at the White House — went through the committee files systematically destroying any evidence which tied the Nixon organization to the Watergate case.

Attorney-General Richard Kleindienst was asked about this destruction of documents last Thursday by Elizabeth Drew in an interview on public television. He made this astonishing reply:

"I don't know whether they (the records) had been destroyed or not. And then the destruction of documents by a campaign committee, or a corporation, doesn't necessarily mean that the law has been violated.

"I'm not connected with the campaign committee. I don't know what they did. I don't know the circumstances. I don't know the facts."

When the ITT scandal broke, officials in the firm's Washington office shredded most of the documents in their possession for fear that proof might turn up of political influence used at the White House to gain a favorable anti-trust settlement. When the Watergate scandal broke, the Nixon campaign organization likewise rushed to destroy any embarrassing evidence. Clearly, Attorney-General Kleindienst has no greater incentive to pursue the question of the missing Nixon campaign documents than he did the missing ITT documents.

Odd Light

Yet enough is now known about the depth and complexity of the Nixon campaign organization's involvement to cast a very odd light on some of President Nixon's statements at his Aug. 29 news conference. His campaign committee, he said, "is conducting its own investigation, independent of the rest, because the committee desires to clear the air and to be sure, as far as any people who have responsibility for this campaign are concerned, that there is nothing that hangs them.

This remarkable inquiry is presumably being conducted by some lonely official — whoever he might be — who was not involved in hiring the wiretappers, paying their bills, reading their transcripts, or destroying the evidence about them."

The president also said, "What really hurts in matters of this sort is not the fact that they occur, because overzealous people in campaigns do things that are wrong. What really hurts is if you try to cover it up."

With so many "over-zealous people" around and so much covering up, America is really hurting these days.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Re-Zoning Eyesores

All over Victoria, even on famed Rockland, older houses are being grabbed by speculators. Hastily converted, breaking, I am sure. most of the rules of the building code, these flint-hearted vultures trade on the poverty and ignorance of the poor. Every possible dime is squeezed out in the highest rent the traffic will stand.

This zeal for profits is only matched by the owners' zest for saving money. Broken toilet fixtures, patched floors, rickety stairs, neglected gardens and scaly walls, only partially describe some of these horrible slums. The gentle reader would be surprised to know how many owners of these rat-infested warrens are very respectable members of society!

There is more than just greed that motivates these owners, there is a calculated strategy. Buy an old house, divide it as cheaply as possible, rent it to pay expenses and yield a high return. Then sit and wait until the city re-zones the lot. Then cash in on doubled or trebled values. To hasten the re-zoning these owners deliberately let the property run down, until the exterior is such an eyesore neighbors are only too happy not to oppose re-zoning.

But these mentally retarded owners may never get re-zoning! The effect of their studied deferred maintenance will cost them many times more than what reasonable upkeep and repair would run.

The ancient principle that said do unto others ... is all too often abandoned when profits prevail. I therefore invite all tenants, past and present, who live in such hovels, to write me. I will personally inspect these rat-traps, report infringements of the building code to the authorities, attempt to publish the names of the proud owners and retain a list of such properties should the owners ever seek rezoning — Monte Vanton, 157 Barkley Terrace.

Uppers and Lowers

I got quite a kick from your article on dentistry in the Times, Sept. 23, where you state the annual checkup can be costly, as a typical one includes; examination $5.00, X-ray $11.00, cleaning and flouride $14.00. The dental surgeons state the present fee schedule is under revision, and is expected to rise another 6 per cent annually. This is after one of their profession who practises in a working class area, has stated many people earning the minimum wage, can no longer afford dental care.

What is the matter with these people who are averaging close to $30,000 per annum. How do they expect those who are on a small fixed income to have what teth they have kept even in a fair shape.

It would not be so bad, if they even did a first class job on your teeth. I myself have had four dentists in the last 15 years, the work of one stayed up, but the others, in my estimation, after years of practice were not even good apprentices.

What gets me is the high rates these men demand for inferior work turned out, compared to some of the old-time dentists of 40 and 50 years ago. I had fillings and gold crowns, which lasted me over 40 years. Two gold crowns were made for me in 1925 by a dental mechanic sitting on a bar room floor, with his cast-iron die at my feet, while I was sitting in a tall poolroom chair, and those crowns lasted, (one) until 1955, the other 1970.

I think the dentists of today are applying all the traffic will bear, knowing that in time the government will be compelled to include dental care with medical care.

On the more cheerful side, this was taken from an ad in a Northern paper:

In introducing ourselves to the public of Northern B.C. we offer the following prices.

Full Upper and Lower Sets	$12.00
Vulcanized Plates	$12.00
Pivot Teeth	$ 7.00
Bridge Work	$ 7.00
Silver Fillings	$ 1.0 0
Gold Plates	$25.00
Gold Crowns	$ 7.00
Gold Fillings	$ 3.00
Platinum Fillings	$ 1.50
Cement Fillings	$ 1.00
Painless Extraction	.50

Teeth Extracted and Filled Absolutely Without Pain Dental Parlors, Carrall and Cordova Street, Vancouver January 16th, 1904.

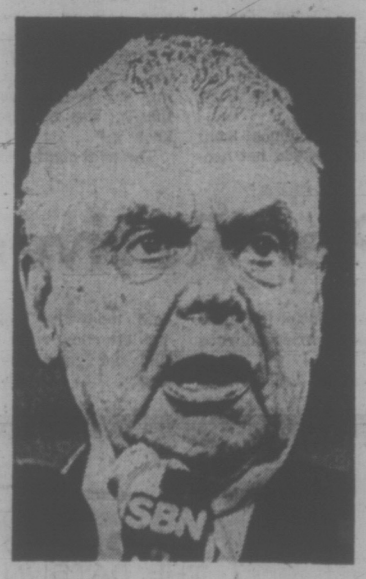

I guess we should be thankful for the improvements of today. The B.C. College of Dental Surgeons are in a position of setting a wonderful example, seeing that their membership are averaging around $30,000 per year, to set a rate and guarantee it for a period of five years. Maybe they could set the trend we all are waiting for. — O. J. Hutchings, 1907 Fort St.

All His Fault

Now that John Diefenbaker has his blood up over the prime minister of Canada's cheap remark about Jesus Christ, perhaps the Progressive Conservatives will get into some real electioneering and some real issues.

I don't think it is necessary to play the gentleman with Mr. Trudeau. He obviously is not much more than a slick little comic.

Anti-Christian feelings displayed in the flood of pornography in Canada,

JOHN DIEFENBAKER
... blood up

wholesale abortions, indifference to the drug problem and a laxity in law and order so great that the Council of Police Chiefs has taken the unprecedented step to castigate officially Mr. Trudeau's policies, indicate all too clearly who pulls Mr. Trudeau's strings. As John Diefenbaker used to say, "the fast buck boys."

Jesus wept. And Mr. Trudeau can smirk all the way to his well-deserved ignominy as just another political hack and axeman.

On October 30 let us see how many will sell their vote to the devil for a Trudeaudollar.—John Gaul, 1276 Rudlin Street.

Sportsmanship

I realize that there are more pressing matters in the world worthy of comment or criticism, but I felt that the Canada-U.S.S.R. hockey tournament, and in particular the final game, could not go by without comment.

The farce of Canadian supremacy in ice hockey has finally been brought home — rudely. Oh, yes, we won the series, but let's see how many players will get $100,000 when they go on strike for it in the future. The attitude of the Vancouver fans, contrary to the feelings expressed by eastern sportswriters, really was "right on." This exhibition of "sportsmanship" (typical, bloodless NHL wrestling) and "team play" (?) will have ramifications — political and otherwise (Canadians were world peacekeepers in the past).

We were told that there were literally thousands of telegrams sent to Moscow expressing "total fan support" — I suppose, for Eagleson and his cohorts gesturing so pleasantly at the Soviet crowds, in the centre of the arena. The Soviet players are dedicated, determined and hard-working — and a team. They played down to the much-exalted Canadian standard of play (oh, I know, the Soviets really did step on our players' skates).

It seemed to become more and more evident, as the series wore on, that Canada was indeed becoming more and more "American." We only have to look at the incessant rationalizing of the Americans (commentators and others) every time a medal was lost at the Munich Olympics, to see that we too tried to rationalize the poor refereeing (Mahovlich sitting on the Soviet goalie), the past defeats, and what looked like a possible defeat in the final game (when the Soviets were ahead 5-3).

Perhaps it is not so much a question of whether Team Canada deserved to win or not, but more the tactics that they used — our kids really idolize these players and professional athletes in general, and this is what is disturbing.

I am proud to be a Canadian, but let's be sure to show the world that we have something to be proud of, and worthy of mention.—D. Bennett, Sidney, B.C.

A Farewell to B.C.

Au Revoir to your majestic mountains, so richly clad, in nature's living green, or otherwise in glacial dress; when their heads are adorned with crowns and coverlets of snow.

Au Revoir to your mighty lakes, so high and lifted up, that they mirror the beauty of a world above the world, and one that is never seen by dwellers on the plains.

Au Revoir to your singing streams, and clashing waterfalls and to those long treed valleys, where live the timid deer and the massive moose, and to those fair meadow lands, where the skylark uplifts its song of Thanksgiving to the gates of day.

And last but not least to those men and women who believed in me, who helped in my work and whose friendship drove away the loneliness of life.

Au Revoir, the hour is growing late, the evening shadows have deepened into the dark of night, and the stillness about me is the solitude of Eternity, and I am waiting. Just waiting for one clear call, and when it comes to me, I shall arise and take transport to another world. Where I have not seen, nor ere heard, nor has it entered into the heart of man; the things which God has prepared, for those who love Him. Au Revoir. — Rev. E. J. Thompson.

After retirement, he spent some years at Cherry Point before going east to rejoin relatives. He now is in Cobourg General Hospital, Ontario, in his 97th year.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of October 4, 1912:

Setting a new record for the 17,000-mile voyage from Liverpool to Victoria via the Suez Canal of fifty-nine days, the big Blue Funnel liner Protesilaus, Capt. Milhench, arrived in port yesterday afternoon. The best previous record was about sixty-five days and the Protesilaus now has to her credit every possible record which she can hang up on the run from the United Kingdom to here.

Think Small—That's Message of Norway's Veto

By JAMES EAYRS

The people of Norway have rejected membership for their country in the European Economic Community. In a nation-wide referendum held last week in which three-quarters of all voters took part, more than a million Norwegians — 54 per cent of the vote — said "Nei Tak" to Europe.

Their decision defied the dicta of most editorialists, pundits and establishment biggies — including the ruling Labor Party government which is out on its ear as a consequence.

It is being put down in shocked European capitals as the irresponsible act of a mindless populist revolt — the usual elitists' put-down of any democratic decision disagreeable for elitists.

But it is not mindless at all. It is a clarion affirmation of the virtues of small nationhood, of the stable state society.

Precisely because they feared a similar result, the powers-that-be in Britain refused to allow that country's relations with Europe to be decided by popular vote. The cry of some Welshman who, at an anti-Common Market rally, had blurted out, "I don't want to become part of a built-up area stretching from Birmingham to Milan!" struck for them an all-too-responsive chord.

Now Norwegians, less distrustful of direct democracy, have determined that they are not going to become part of a built-up area stretching from Trondheim to Turin — and they will be surely better off for it.

It is about time that a blow was struck on behalf of nation-statehood. The antics of nationalism had earned it a bad press. Publicists, impressed by the pettiness of so much nation-state squabbling in contrast to the carnage of so much nation-state warfare, were quick to come to the conclusion that statehood based on nationality was a political grotesque.

"Could there be anything more absurd," George Kennan asks rhetorically, "than a world divided into several dozens of secular societies, each devoted to the cultivation of the myth of its own over-riding importance and virtue, of the sacrosanctity of its own unlimited independence?" The concept of the nation, Pierre Trudeau once wrote in still more sweeping condemnation, "is a concept that corrupts all."

Along with derision and abuse, nation-statehood has borne repeated predictions of obsolescence and demise—beginning with the prediction of a British colonial secretary in 1904: "The day of small nations has passed away, the day of empires has come."

It is hard to think of a less prophetic statement. In the wake of departing imperialists, nation-states have bobbed up like so many unsinkable Molly Browns. Efforts to unite them, to merge their mini-sovereignties in what political economists consider more viable units of production and administration, have come almost everywhere to grief.

The world today is littered with the remnants of fractured federations — in East Africa, South Asia, South-East Asia, the West Indies; what of the world tomorrow?

Even in older crucibles, where the lava of nationalism has had time to cool and harden, separatisms heave and strain — in France, in Italy, in Spain.

And who believes that the Soviet Empire would hold together any longer without the coercive apparatus of a totalitarian police state to deprive Ukrainians and Balts and Tartars of that national autonomy all so obviously crave?

Might not the tenacity of nationalism, of which the world daily provides fresh evidence — from Lithuania to Croatia, from Wales to Quebec — be properly construed not as testimony to the perversity of the political instinct but rather as man's need to scale down Leviathan?

That is why more than a million Norwegians have turned their backs on Europe. They came to understand as so-called "well-informed circles" failed to understand that the confederation of nations is like the Los Angelization of cities — not liberating, but dehumanizing.

The virtues of the smaller scale were preached by Plato and by Aristotle, but that does not make them wrong. Is it not easier to lead the good life, the free life, the decent and humane life, in modest-sized societies than in the super-states? In Denmark rather than America, Sweden rather than the Soviet Union, Samoa rather than India? Do not entrust this generalization to scrutiny by computers, only by common sense.

Why did the disappearance of the Baltic countries behind the Soviet frontier in 1940 touch off unsettling reverberations around the Western world? Why are we still moved by the recollection of their tragedy? Because there, within the confines of tiny states — Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia — three small but gifted peoples had attained with only the healthiest form of rivalry — the Artotelian ideal — only to have it snatched away from them at gunpoint.

Who preaches the Aristotelian ideal today? Only a few crankish voices drowned out by the din of political unitarians.

There is the voice of Edmund Wilson who, in his Patriotic Gore, uttered the unmentionable thought that America ought not to have paid the price of civil war: "Was it worth that terrible struggle" — these aren't Wilson's words, but the words of Jason Epstein writing about Wilson's words — "so that the United States could become still another large power unit, along with Russia, Britain and Germany? So that Lincoln, like Bismarck and later Lenin, could contrive an empire whose fate was inevitably to collide with those other empires that were monstrously growing in the world, like great biological malformations?"

There is the voice of Arnold Spekke, Latvian scholar and diplomat: "The small nations may watch numerically greater nations travel along their highways, while they themselves cling to their own intimate corner in the world where the secluded blossoms — not infrequently of unique shapes and colors — of their own human sensibilities grow and burst into flower."

Most insistently over the years, there is the voice of

. . . warring empires

Leopold Kohr, a former Austrian now teaching at the University of Puerto Rico. Not "a small but gifted people," rather "a gifted people because small," that is the proposition to which Kohr has devoted a lifetime's propagating. Small, says Kohr, is safer.

Little states don't fight as much, when they do don't hurt as much. Small is or can be more efficient.

Above all, small is beautiful. "Man's life lies in the spirit and the spirit can develop only in the unoppressive shelter of a small society. It is no coincidence, therefore, that the world's culture has been produced in little states."

For these reasons, Kohr advocated not the federation of nations but the breakdown of nations. His book of that title prescribes political disintegration: "Instead of union, let us have disunion now. Instead of fusing the small, let us dismember the big. Instead of creating fewer and larger states, let us create more and smaller ones."

It is hard for us Canadians to sing in praise of smaller countries. Our geography is the most sprawling in the world. Our motto rings of jingo-geopolitics. We are brought up in fear of tribalism. The very world "separatist" induces an irrational terror. What Norwegians decided last week lies beyond our understanding. That is our loss, not theirs.

Football Families Are Out

By DENNIS BLOODWORTH
The London Obsesrver

Singapore sets an example for the world when it comes to defusing the population bomb. Its birth-rate has fallen from nearly 30 per 1,000 ten years ago to a mere 17 per 1,000. A survey has shown that local newspapers were the most efficient propagandists for family planning.

These figures gladden the heart of Lee Kuan Yew, a Prime Minister who is convinced that there is danger in numbers, and that one key to a healthy and equitable society is for couples to have two children instead of ten.

Singapore has succeeded where China has failed. The net increase of urban population on the Communist mainland, allowing for deaths, is still about two per cent. Yet in the blood-and-iron days of the guerrilla war against Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists, and of the "Long March" to Yenan, any urge to have a large family would have been looked upon askance as bourgeois-reactionary backsliding.

The formidable and fecund wife of Marshal Chu Te, then Commander-in-Chief of the Red Army, and now an octagenarian member of the Chinese Politburo, managed to find time to bear him 10 offspring, but couples like Premier Chou En-lai and his wife are without issue today because they devoted their lives to the Communist struggle.

MAO AND HIS LATEST MRS.

The third wife of Mao is reported to have given him several children in his early mountain "soviet" on the borders of Kiangsi Province, but these he teasingly called "counter-revolutionaries", for they were in his way at a time when he was fighting against the Nationalists around him and struggling for supremacy within the Communist movement at the same time. Once he was forced to break out of his southern base and make the Long March to the northwest, therefore, he farmed them out among peasant families and, as far as is known, they were never recovered.

He had already had three sons by his second wife, and was to have two daughters by his fourth. But while he may not have been a model of prudence in the eyes of the pill-pushers he can scarcely be said to have enjoyed the fruits of his labors.

Of his sons he remarked bitterly in 1959, "one of them is dead and the other is mad." And the lost identity and unknown whereabouts of the third have given rise to much futile speculation. Mao would agree with Lee that there is neither joy nor a just society to be found any more in fathering a football team. A pair of ping-pong partners suffices.

McGOVERN IS FEELING IT

A Backlash Against Elitism in U.S.

By LOU CANNON
The Washington Post

There is a great, honest contempt for elitism abroad in the land these days, and it is one of the reasons that Sen. George McGovern is finding the going tough in working-class towns across America.

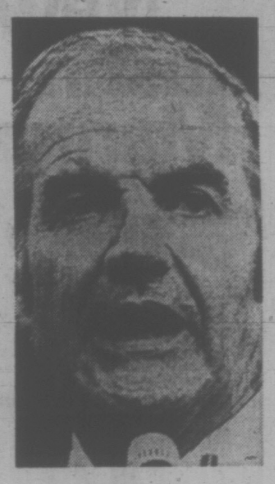

It is the contempt of people who work with their hands at hard jobs to pay their medical bills and buy some furniture and send their kids to college.

It is the contempt of people who are mostly Democratic by tradition and self-interest, but who resent being written off as "hard hats" or bigoted ethnics who dislike black people and students.

These are the people whom the Nixon strategists are counting on to give them an electoral victory in the industrial cities of the north and who will probably vote for the president all right — unless they are exposed to the workings of the Committee for the Re-election of the President.

These working class voters, the object of vague mistrust by the McGovern elitists, have been the subject of bug-like microscopic study by the Committee for the Re-election, known uniformly to Republican professionals by the loosely assembled acronym of CREEP.

They have been classified by their origins, their income and their church and as carefully targeted as any unmen and their families are known as "peripheral urban ethnics," which is the kind of language you use to keep people in their place. Except for Fred Malek, the Czech from Chicago who came up the hard way to become a millionaire, there is scarcely anyone at CREEP who would know a "peripheral urban ethnic" if he saw one.

McGOVERN
. . . he dug a hole

But never mind that. Victory is in the bag, or so it seems, and the careerists at the committee are climbing over one another in the next administration.

All this may be unfair to the lower-paid types at the committee, many of whom work hard in the president's behalf. But they work in an atmosphere of amateurism and arrogance for bosses who are willing to take a lot of credit when there is little to take credit about.

With a few significant exceptions, these bosses are too busy worrying about their own political futures to answer any phone calls. Electronic buzzers keep undesirable types or curious citizens, out of the committee offices, and the security is both jittery and tight.

None of that is going to determine the outcome of the election, which still seems secure for Mr. Nixon. Sen. McGovern dug a hole for himself early and it is doubtful if he is rescuable by the Committee for the Re-Election.

The working man in Cleveland or Detroit or Pittsburgh will base his vote on his feelings about the country and his evaluation of the two men who seek to lead it.

Afterward, if Mr. Nixon gets the landslide he is looking for, the boys at CREEP will pat themselves on the back and tell anyone who will listen how they helped push the president over the top. And that will be a very dubious claim.

An Excess of Couth

By ISRAEL SHENKER
New York Times

S. J. Perelman, the man without a country home, has returned to his native New York City.

"English life, while very pleasant, is rather bland," he said. "I expected kindness and gentility and I found it, but there is such a thing as too much couth.

"Their rye bread has no caraway seeds, and their name for corned beef is salt beef — and it doesn't compare with what you can get on the Upper West Side or on the Lower East Side" (sections of New York City).

When he left these shores, two years ago, his appetites for the pleasures of New York were sated, and he was dimly perceived to be uttering a plague on all its houses.

"New York was then — and it still obviously is — a very difficult place for anyone to be," he said. "When you first return, the city seems very distressing, and all the things we know about New York are true — the dirt, the disorder, the violence. But I find myself adapting: I walk on the balls of my feet at night.

"Having been born here, I guess I wouldn't want to renounce my birthright. Perhaps, just barely perhaps, it's necessary to go somewhere else to get a view of one's city.

"When I'm away, I miss the tension, the give and take. I feel it's a great mistake for any writer to cut himself off from his roots. One's work suffers by trying to transplant it to another milieu.

PERELMAN

"My style is haut melange — a mixture of all the sludge I read as a child, all the cliches, liberal doses of Yiddish, criminal slang and some of what I was taught in a Providence, Rhode Island, school by impatient teachers. When I tried to think of an idiomatic expression in London, I had to reach for it. I felt out of touch with the idiom."

In England he felt forcibly retired: "So much of English life is designed to avoid incident — 'So sorry,' 'Excuse me' — they're erecting a hedge around themselves."

And he suffered the pangs of sloth: "Have you ever gone to a doctor to have him remove your sloth?"

"I feel quite revitalized by being in New York," he said. "I feel more like writing than I did before. That doesn't mean I rush to the typewriter. Any writer who tells you he's in a hurry to get back to that desk is not a writer."

His best friends live in or near the city; not far from his East Side sublet is a bakery with seeds in the rye; he found an affable Chinese laundryman; and there is a discount drug store. "What more do I need?" he demanded.

"I never made any promise not to come back or to become an expatriate," he said. "I don't even like the word.

"The rest of America I have always liked very much. I love New England. I love the countryside. I revisited the Bucks County farm where I lived 40 years."

Why should you have to sprint to get a hot shower?

An oil-fired heater can give you up to 30 gallons of hot shower water in 20 minutes.

It's morning shower time in some homes, this is what happens. Dad gets on his mark. Sets. And there he goes. If the family beats poor old Dad to the shower and uses up all the hot water, he may not get a hot shower at all. Not unless his house has an oil-fired water heater.

Oil can heat water 3 times as fast as gas; 6 times as fast as electricity. So it makes a lot of sense that an oil heater is going to give your family more hot water faster for hot showers, and washing soiled clothes. Not to mention the pile of breakfast dishes.

Oil really does heat faster. It's a fact we can prove. If you're not heating water with oil now, sprint to your phone and call us on our hot line.

What Cost Gaglardi? Levi Promised Details

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said Tuesday he plans to release financial details of how much it cost the government for his predecessor, Phil Gaglardi, to operate three government cars in three cities.

Levi was elaborating on his announcement Monday that Gaglardi, former MLA for Kamloops, maintained three cars — one each in Victoria, Vancouver and Kamloops.

SOMEONE TOLD

When questioned about the charge Tuesday, Levi said he had been approached by someone outside his department, who told him Gaglardi formerly used three government cars.

"As far as I'm concerned, he had three cars for his own exclusive use," the minister said.

"The public has a right to know and I will have more to say about the cost factor later," Levi said.

He said he has given instructions to have the vehicles returned to the department car pool to be used when needed by department employees. The minister added that he can't foresee the need for any more than one car for his own use, and even then it would only be when he needed to travel on government business.

Levi was then asked by reporters if the issue of Gaglardi's use of three cars was brought up to discredit the former Social Credit minister.

EXCELLENT JOB

"There is no question of wanting to discredit Mr. Gaglardi," Levi said. "I think he did an excellent job of that himself during the election campaign.

"If he is upset about it, well that is the give and take of public life."

Levi said he was not aware of any statements by Gaglardi that the former minister had used the cars only for government business.

"He had three cars at his disposal and I think that's wrong. I'm not out looking under the carpet. I was asked about it and I said I would look into it."

LEVI
. . . give and take

Levi identified Gaglardi's cars as a 1965 Chevrolet for use in Victoria, a 1968 Oldsmobile in Kamloops and another 1968 Oldsmobile in Vancouver.

He said he has used one here in Victoria and that all three are "very highly-powered operations."

MINISTER LOOKING FOR NAME

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said Tuesday he is considering changing the name of his department, which now goes by the name of the department of rehabilitation and social improvement.

Levi said he is seeking suggestions for a change of name, mainly because the present name is "such a big mouthful."

"I even have trouble remembering it myself sometimes," he said.

The minister said he wants "a name which would be more appropriate to the directions the department is going to take. I don't even know what 'social improvement' means."

Gov't to Raise Day Care Grant

The department of rehabilitation has moved to increase monthly payments to operators of private day care centres from $70 per child per month to $80 per child per month.

A press release from the office of Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said the purpose of the increase is "to bring the department contributions in line with actual fees now being charged."

The payments from the rehabilitation department go to private day care centre operators who accept children assigned to them from the department.

Deputy Minister Ray Rickinson said about 300 children in the province are involved, in 48 day care centres.

The increase in the grants is part of the department's policy and requires no legislative approval, Rickinson said.

Track Gets Moral Support

Funds for an unfinished athletic track at Claremont High School were sought at Saanich municipal finance committee Tuesday but petitioners had to be satisfied with moral support.

The committee said the matter would be reconsidered when a firm cost figure for the work is available but indicated the decision would be in the hands of next year's finance committee and council.

A delegation led by Claremont physical education head G. L. Montgomety said $25,000 is needed for the project and that through student efforts it was hoped to raise about half that sum. He noted School District 63 had already put about $30,000 into the work.

Students told the committee that in its condition at present, the track is "hard as concrete" and results in a condition among runners known as "shin splints."

When they avoid the track and run on the adjoining grass they are rebuked by the groundskeeper, students said.

Some 450 boys and girls are in the school sports program and the track team numbers 80. Efforts are made to use other facilities, which are not always available, the delegation said.

Ald. Leslie Passmore noted Saanich had already contributed to the cost of the track by donating topsoil and acquiring some of the acreage needed.

Chairman Ald. Alan Newberry said, "Certainly I think we should make a grant to this organization. The amount is rather frightening . . ."

Construction Halts

MACKENZIE (CP) — Construction workers at the site of a new British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. pulp mill about 80 miles north of Prince George left the job Tuesday because members of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada were on strike at the company's nearby stud and sawmill.

The construction men crossed the PPWC picket lines Monday on the instructions of union officers who believed the building site was not involved in the dispute.

But, after meeting Monday with PPWC officials, Jim Kinnaird, president of the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council, said the men would not cross the line again.

RCMP began patrolling the picket line Monday after reports that rocks were thrown at two vehicles crossing it.

About 300 PPWC members are on strike at the stud and sawmill. They have turned down a company contract offer of an 87-cent-an-hour wage increase over two years on a base rate of $3.66 and a top rate of $5.17 for a sawyer.

NEW BID TO CUT AID TO HIPPIES

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. justice department has appealed to the United States Supreme Court to prevent so-called hippies living in communes from receiving federal food stamps.

Last May, a three-judge federal panel in the District of Columbia ruled that the exclusion of communes was unconstitutional and irrrelevant to the purposes of the food-stamp law which, it said, was designed to improve the agricultural economy and alleviate hunger.

Grain 'Monkeying' to Be Probed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal Labor Minister Martin O'Connell said Tuesday he doesn't know whether anyone is monkeying around with the movement of grain trains to the port of Vancouver, but he will look into the situation here.

Speaking at a news conference, O'Connell said he would attempt to get clarification of the wheat shipments situation from Justic Minister Otto Lang, who is also responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board.

O'Connell said he would investigate after being asked about reports that there would be no grain cars arriving in Vancouver after Thursday.

The reports began after longshoremen and grain handlers reported there were no grain cars for unloading at two elevators.

O'Connell said railways have been "scrambling around" to find enough cars to handle grain shipments, and repeated a previous announcement that the government would build 2,000 railway cars to be leased for handling grain shipments.

Union leaders have been complaining about shortages of work in grain-handling and longshore export business since Parliament passed a compulsory back-to-work order last month to end a strike by longshoremen on the west coast.

Wall Street's 'Bad Breath' Cuts Joke Index to Zero

NEW YORK TIMES

NEW YORK — Wall Street, like other arenas of mystery, sometimes best reveals its mood by indirection. By what is left unsaid. By what is left unrented.

Consider, for example, the perilously low level of The Joke Index. When there is action in the stock market, either up or down, the jokes flourish, traveling swiftly between traders and floor brokers and salesmen. The jokes are often ethnic in nature, many are retreads and some are unprintable in a family newspaper. But they betoken a certain feisty spirit, a what-the-hell attitude, a sense of clan and community.

But the jokes have stopped circulating lately and to some seasoned swappers the silence is ominous. There is plenty of time to coin a jest, but the will seems strangely absent.

"The only one I've heard recently is about the Christmas bonus this year at one of the other houses," admits a Wall Street partner. "It's going to give each employe a short sale of 1,000 shares in the firm's own stock."

CAUTION NO JOKE

But the caution stalking the financial district is no joke. Consider the stretches of empty office space, a legacy of the 1969-70 market mayhem, a sign of merger and consolidation in the area where Captain Kidd once had his house.

When you open the door to one such vacated floor and walk through the echoing halls, you are reminded somehow of a deserted mining town in Colorado. In a wall recess, the sign admonishes. "PLEASE DO NOT THROW CUPS BEHIND WATER COOLER. THE MANAGEMENT." Now even the cooler is gone.

Inside the brokerage world, the talk runs on the somber side. A private worry of the partners is the public — and why it's not investing. There is no panic downtown, but a bull market in uncertainty certainly does exist. There is a feeling that things somehow have got out of joint.

Analysts say the market has acquired "bad breadth," that the relatively stable performance of the Dow-Jones industrials fails to indicate the pounding taken by hundreds of other stocks. Only the secretaries appear oblivious. "Oh, I never talk to my friends about the market," one girl exclaimed.

DOUBLE BLAST

What overtly has hit Wall Street is the double-barrel blast of lower prices and lower volume. In the three weeks following Labor Day — a period generally considered as "pointing the market's direction" — stocks showed gains on only two days.

Volume stumbled along at several million shares below the rule-of-thumb break-even point of around 14 million shares daily. It meant simply that many firms lost money in September.

One member of the New York Stock Exchange was browsing in the Doubleday book store directly across the street last Monday afternoon. "It's like a morgue over there," he said with a nod.

Over at the American Stock Exchange, the floor action is agonizingly slow.

At 11:18 a.m. last Tuesday, an Amex specialist stood beside his booth and observed: "There's no public participation in this market. Six of my 22 stocks haven't even opened yet."

NO OPTIMISM

And here is the assessment by one of the truly big producers in the securities business: "There is no optimism around here. The market appears to be making a bottom. But the problem is that you don't know how long that will take. What is needed to really turn this market up? A different atmosphere. Investors are sick of controls. Wage and price controls. Dividend controls. The public is being hurt by higher commission rates. Their incentive for trading has been cut enormously."

Institutions and overseas clients have scaled down their investment activity recently. But with the economy on the recovery road and corporate profits rebounding, why aren't more average Americans in the stock market? After all, they have the money. Their net flow of savings into banks and thrift institutions swelled to an enormous annual rate of $71 billion during the second quarter.

"I'll tell you why the public isn't in this market," observed one hedge-fund manager. "It's gotten wise. It's been eaten alive in the last several years by inflation and by the money it's lost in stocks. And there's a better wheel going — the bond market."

ELECTION UNEASE

The sense of unease and uncertainty in Wall Street is compounded in some minds by the expectation that President Nixon will win in November. That prospect, strange as it may seem in a market that once feared the election of Sen. George McGovern, now has created its own set of doubts. The phrase "Nixon will turn Republican after the election" is often repeated. Some analysts reason that Nixon, in a second-term effort to stamp out inflation, will take steps that could disrupt the stock market in 1973. Tougher controls, for example.

But one of the time-honored stratagems of the stock market holds that when too many people crowd over to one side of the boat, it can be smart to do the opposite. That's known as "contrary opinion."

So it is that some Wall Streeters regard the present gloom as merely an interim period when "it's darkest just before the dawn."

MINE BOARD REMAINS BRISK

Trading on the Vancouver Stock Exchange mining board cooled off slightly Tuesday, trading just over 3 million shares compared with 3.8 million on Monday.

Trading was still fairly brisk today.

Makaoo Development gained .09 at .65 on 171,000 shares. It has signed a development agreement with the Teck Mining group.

Inland Copper gained .11 at .37 on 43,500 shares. The company has acquired an option to buy four prospecting permits in Cochise County, Arizona, for $60,000 and 300,000 shares.

Rayore Enterprises has acquired a 91 per cent interest in 50 claims in the Liard mining division for 110,000 shares.

Carlise, Douglas and Brink Hudson have failed to exercise their options on 50,000 shares each of Calta Mines.

Reako Mines is out of primary distribution.

Montreal Longshoremen Get A New Boss . . . A Computer

MONTREAL (CP) — A longshoreman telephoning the offices of the Maritime Employers Association here Sunday evening will begin a unique experiment in ship cargo handling planned eventually to link this port with those of Quebec City and Trois-Rivieres.

The longshoreman will announce his work number and be assigned for duty Monday on a ship docked somewhere along Montreal's 12 miles of waterfront. The assignment will have been worked out on a computer.

"There's nothing like this system anywhere else in North America and as far as I know in the whole world," said Arnold Masters, president of the MEA. His association groups management of the three ports.

Under the new system the 51 companies using stevedores in the port will place their manpower needs at 4 p.m. for the following day.

When all the data is in, the computer is programmed to determine the freight-handling jobs available and to fill them under the provisions of the collective agreement within five minutes.

The computer will also be used to administer the $45 million annual payroll for the 3,200 longshoremen in the three St. Lawrence River ports.

A similar system, planned for Vancouver, has not yet been put into operation because management and labor cannot agree on how to do so.

WORK GUARANTEED

Effective Oct. 15, as the result of a recent arbitration decision, the St. Lawrence River longshoremen have a job security provision in their contract guaranteeing them 40 hours of pay or $205 per week.

"In effect, we've created a normal, industrial, personnelhandling situation out of a pool labor force, which is quite a trick," Mr. Masters said.

Until now, there have been 96 17-man gangs of longshoremen working in the port with another 100 men working in the freight sheds.

No matter how many men were needed for an individual job, each gang foreman brought all his 17 men to work, and their job was changed daily. There was no direct contact between the longshoremen and their employer.

Under the new system, every man will be assigned as an individual.

For management there is the advantage that each job will be handled by the exact number of men needed and not by an arbitrary group of 17 men, and with the men staying on one job until it is completed, efficiency should also be increased, Mr. Masters said.

He also noted that with a fairer distribution of work among the men, the working atmosphere should be improved.

The first stage of the program begins with Montreal's 2,500 stevedores.

The computer will be programmed with the longshoremen's special skills, age, weight, height, marital status — "the sort of thing every company has on file about its employees but we've never had before."

OTHERS TO JOIN

By early November, longshoremen in Quebec City and Trois-Rivieres should be hooked into the system. By the end of the year, other cargo handlers should be included in the system too.

The computer is serviced by 35 people and will cost about $500,000 per year to operate.

Capt. Vilis Auns, general marine superintendent of March Shipping, was not as confident in the program as Mr. Masters.

He said the program depends on shipping companies knowing their exact labor needs the day before longshoremen are called, but in his experience the number of men needed to handle cargo was usually not known until the vessel arrived in port.

"I think we can overcome that," Mr. Masters said. "I know the program will work. The big question is how we will cope with the changes that flow from it."

2 Demonstrators Get $9,000 Award in D.C.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A U.S. federal judge has awarded $9,000 in damages to two persons arrested in the 1971 Mayday anti-war demonstration here, saying the rights of citizens must be safeguarded "particularly in times of stress and strain."

The two, Peter Roberts and Dennis Lieberman, were among 7,000 persons arrested in Washington on May 7 during the massive demonstration at the time of the U.S. incursion into Cambodia.

In the course of the suit, the District of Columbia argued that the demonstrations presented police with an emergency situation.

"The court does not feel that it should take into account in any way the circumstances prevailing in the community at that time," U.S. district court judge Gerhard Gesell said in his ruling Tuesday.

"The constitutional protections that are available to citizens of this country are protections which must be zealously safeguarded and the appropriate time to safeguard them particularly is in times of stress and strain.

"They were not protected here by the authorities and there is nothing in the circumstances of the arrest which led the court to feel there was an emergency condition confronting the police at the point where these arrests were made that would in any way have justified the conduct of the police officers."

Roberts and Lieberman, labor department employees, were arrested at a downtown intersection although they said they showed identification and were on their way to work.

Of the 13,000 persons arrested in massive police sweeps during the week of Mayday demonstrations, only a few were ever brought to trial.

Edmonton Hearing 'Impossible' Groos Tells CRTC Session

EDMONTON — By holding a hearing here on an application for a cable television rate increase in Victoria, the Canadian Radio-Television Commission would find it "difficult, if not impossible" to gauge public reaction to the proposal, Victoria MP David Groos told a CRTC hearing today.

Groos asked the CRTC to adjourn its hearing of the application by Victoria Cablevision Ltd. to increase its subscriber rate from $4.50 to $5 per month.

He suggested that the commission consider the application at a West Coast hearing, preferably in Victoria, to give those affected by the proposed increase a chance to state their views.

A similar request was made by Edmonton lawyer J. W. K. Shortreed, representing the city of Victoria.

TOO DISTANT

Groos said it was impossible for Victoria area residents to be heard effectively at such a distant sitting.

"Physically, Edmonton is on the other side of the Continental Divide and, financially, it is light years away from Victoria, particularly to those people on limited incomes who make up such a large part of Victoria's population and who rely so heavily on cablevision service."

He also noted that the city had been denied financial information on the company's operations, both by Victoria Cablevision and the CRTC, and questioned whether a fair hearing could be held under such circumstances.

The firm's financial position is "fundamental to the merits of any rate increases, particularly in a monopolistic field such as cablevision," he said.

OPEN MIND

"Although I have tried to maintain an open mind as to the merits of this application, I find it very difficult to comprehend how this applicant can expect anything but opposition from its subscribers to a rate increase when it will not make its financial position known to them."

Groos said it was clear from the "prosperity" of Victoria Cablevision's parent company, Premier Cablevision Ltd., that there was no real urgency in the rate increase application and no harm would be caused by a postponement.

Statistics available to the commission would show Victoria to have an unusually high percentage of residents subscribing to television.

'LOCKED'

Thousands of these people were now "locked in" to the system, having disposed of their TV aerials.

"Victoria also has an abnormally high percentage of retired citizens, many of them on fixed and often marginal or bare subsistence incomes.

Cablevision to these people is a major force in their lives, both as entertainment and as a means to keep in contact with the events of the world.

"I personally know of elderly citizens who have chosen to subscribe to cablevision service rather than have a telephone when their limited means would not permit both. To these people in particular it is important that this hearing be held where they can make their views known."

Hotel 'Holier-Than-Thou'

A Victoria alderman says it is ironical that the management of the Empress Hotel should be concerned about the problem of tourism touting on the Cuaseway, because the hotel itself is "the biggest offender."

Ald. Harold Olafson was commenting on a letter to Mayor Peter Pollen from Louis Finamore, general manager of the Empress, in which he commended the city for wanting to clear the Causeway of barkers pushing conducted tours in sightseeing vehicles.

Finamore said the hotel management had received complaints from guests who were irritated by barkers "bearing pamphlets, not unlike panhandlers."

Olafson, who is part-owner of one of the sightseeing firms operating on the Causeway, charged the Empress with being engaged in a "tourist rip-off while, at the same time, assuming a holier-than-thou attitude."

He said the hotel has various arrangements with sightseeing firms that allowed their barkers the exclusive right to sell tour tickets on hotel property.

Tory Cites Deficit

A huge deficit in the Unemployment Insurance Fund is proof of how ineffective the Trudeau government has been in fighting unemployment, federal Progressive Conservative candidate Allan McKinnon said Tuesday.

McKinnon said he was "astonished" to learn the deficit is $544 million for the first seven months of this year.

"When Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey said the $544 million was a 'drop in the bucket, we can see the 'Trudeau shrug of indifference' has spread to others in his government," McKinnon said.

24-Hour Plan For Child Care

BURNABY (CP) — Municipal council has asked for a report on the cost and most suitable location for a 24-hour child care centre for working mothers.

In the meantime, council will ask the provincial government how much it would be prepared to contribute toward running such a centre.

Hearing Opens

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Labor Relations Board held a hearing Tuesday into the application of the Canadian Aluminum Smelter and Allied Workers' Union to represent employees at Alcan's plant at Kitimat.

The 1,800 workers involved are members of the United Steelworkers of America.

Steelworker spokesman Jack Diamond said both parties presented their cases and it now was up to the board to decide whether a vote should be called.

'Purge Textbooks'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Status of Women Council of British Columbia will ask Education Minister Eileen Dailly to get rid of school text books which discourage girls from entering the working world.

Council president Joan Wallace said Tuesday the request is contained in the council's brief on education which will be sent to Mrs. Dailly. "Right from kindergarten through elementary school our text books depict women almost exclusively as homemakers," she said.

Interior Share

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Members of the Prince George and District Community Arts Council have agreed that the B.C. Interior deserves a bigger share of money allocated from the $10-million provincial cultural fund. Ross Craigie, treasurer of the council, proposed that all community arts councils north of Kamloops join forces to make their views known to the government.

Jurist Retires

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chief Justice Herbert Davey, the judge who wanted robbers flogged has retired from his post.

His retirement was marked at a special session of the British Columbia Court of Appeal.

"The law has been good to me and I hope I have made some permanent contribution to it," said the 73-year-old jurist.

Shortly after his appointment in 1967, he suggested that people who commit robbery with violence on elderly and defenseless people should be whipped. He later added that whippings should only be administered when rehabilitation is not a main factor.

Soviet Trip Set

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union will leave Oct. 20 for a 10-12 day visit to the Soviet Union.

Union secretary-treasurer Jack Nichol and general executive members Elgin Neish of Victoria and Norma Jones of Prince Rupert will make the trip at the invitation of the Soviet foodworkers' union.

Chiropractors Meet

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. C. P. Heuser was re-elected president of the British Columbia Chiropractic Association at its annual general meeting.

Heuser said the association was looking forward to more chiropractic benefits under the medical insurance plan under the new democratic party government.

OAK BAY HALL PLAN SHELVED

Plans for an $80,000 addition to Oak Bay's municipal hall will have to be shelved until the money is available.

At a meeting of Oak Bay council a recommendation from the lands and buildngs committee for calling tenders was considered and tabled.

Ald. Douglas Watts asked where the money was coming from.

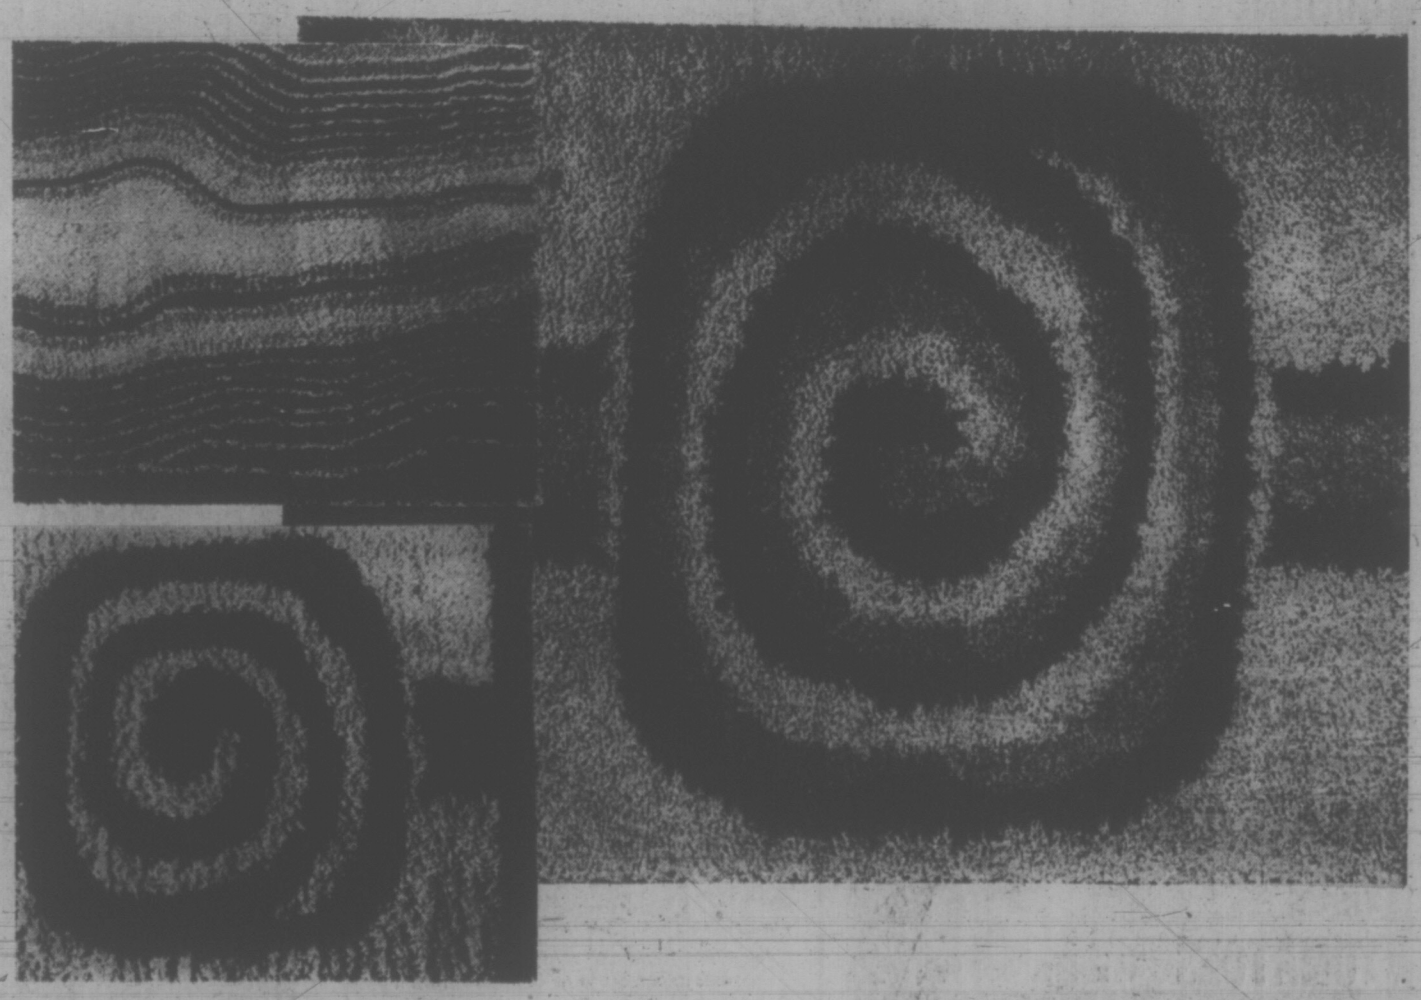

He was told there had been $26,000 in the street lighting budget that could have been diverted to help finance the addition. However, half that amount had already been spent on lighting.

Nixon Gov't Most Corrupt: Nader

The WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — Ralph Nader said Tuesday his study of Congress "shows convincingly we are in the midst of a grave constitutional crisis" because Congress is giving its constitutional powers away to committee chairmen, the executive bureaucracy and special interest groups.

At a new conference to unveil the first part of his current study of Congress, a paperback called Who Runs Congress — The President, Big business or You? Nader concluded that the answer was the president and business.

The book contains critical assessments of some of the most powerful men in Congress — among them House Speaker Carl Albert, Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield, House ways and means chairman Wilbur Mills, Senate finance chairman Russell Long and House armed services chairman F. Edward Hebert.

Asked of President Nixon compounded the problem by being unduly sympathetic to big corporations, Nader said, "This administration is not sympathetic to corporations, it is indentured to corporations."

He charged that the Nixon administration was easily "the most corrupt in history, but said he was not calling for the president's removal because that would be "like replacing the rose on the top of a trash heap."

Noise to Stay

VERNON (CP) — Mr. Justice G. F. T. Gregory dismissed Friday an application from an Okanagan Mission couple who sought an injunction against equipment used to scare birds in vineyards. Richard and Edith Kuipers alleged the equipment was noisy and caused them mental anguish. The judge did however, ordered the vineyard owners to use the equipment sparingly.

The corruption goes all the way down to the bottom of the bureaucracy, he said, and unless citizens became aroused, removing the president would change nothing.

Nader suggested that Congress might win back its lost power from the executive branch and special interest groups by reforming itself.

He called for a special session of Congress to enact reform at the end of the session in 1973.

Changes are needed, Nader said, in the areas of committee jurisdiction, seniority, secrecy, rules, campaign finance, disclosure of interest groups, absenteeism, staff and information systems.

Echoling themes put forth in the book, Nader said:

● Special interests control Congress through campaign contributions and lobbying, which provides the kind of information on a bill members and their staffs "cannot produce or criticize."

● Congress is deficient and in the middle of the 19th century as far as facilities and techniques are concerned. "The only computer on Capitol Hill puts out the payroll, while the federal bureaucracy has 4,000 computers at its service."

● Congressmen waste time by providing personal service to their constituents, when they should be overseeing and legislating instead. Nader estimated 30 per cent of a member's time is spent on taking up cases for constituents.

● Congress is ruled by archaic procedures and autocratic committee chairmen, permits too many closed hearings and operates under rules that frustrate its democratic operations.

The book, written by three of Nader's most trusted "raiders" — James Fallows, Mark Green and David Zwick — is intended to whet interest for the rest of the study.

Still to come are 435 profiles of members of Congress, which are to be released around Oct. 18, studies on each committee and a series of volumes on such topics as conflict of interest in Congress and campaign financing.

DRUG FOUND IN VEAL

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. government meat inspectors have found illegal residues of streptomycin in some veal calf carcasses tested for antibiotics this year.

The agriculture department said Tuesday the drug, commonly used in livestock feed as a growth stimulant, showed up in 12 of 264 calves slaughtered for the consumer veal market.

In 11 animals, streptomycin residues were found only in kidney tissue. It was in the liver and red meat as well as in the kidneys of the other.

Streptomycin is among a group of antibiotics used as feed additives in livestock, dairy and poultry production. It helps prevent bacterial and disease development.

Canada Aids Red Cross Project

Ottawa (CP) — Canada will provide $300,000 in emergency relief to South Vietnam for purchase by the League of Red Corss Societies of drugs needed for treatment of refugees.

The Canadian International Development Agency said today that in addition there will be $80,000 worth of other medical supplies, 600 tons of milk powder and $300,000 worth of canned fish.

The milk and canned fish are used by South Vietnam for its maternal and child-care feeding program as well as in the care of displaced persons.

Rock Hound

Stockpiled on Store Street, mounds of rock will disappear soon, to be used for an extension of the breakwater at Oak Bay Marina. The rock comes from the excavation site at 740 Burdett where a 14-storey highrise will be built. A Pacific Pile Driving Co. official said his firm has been awarded a $179,835 contract and work will begin on the breakwater extension soon.

Making It With Mary —A New Look in Banks

I suppose there's nothing sinister or socially significant in The Royal Bank's replacement of one Mary with another Mary, a major switch in financial circles so far ignored by our business editor, but it sure as shootin' shows the incredible change in banks.

Mary Number One, a fine, big, full-bosomed girl, is currently on view in the Royal Bank's television commercials, turning over her duties as resident sex symbol to a cooler Mary Number Two, a tall, lissome number who vows to carry on the crusade, namely the maintenance of the Royal Bank's posture as an ever-loving, open-armed institution just dying to enfold you in its soft embrace.

Well, "sex symbol" may be too strong a term, but I'd doubt if any red-blooded Canadian youth could confront either Mary and keep his mind entirely on interest rates or amortization.

The message — "We can help make things happen" — will remain the same, offering errant, double-entendre thoughts to the more depraved or deprived depositors, but it is by no means a new attitude. I forget which bank it was — Montreal, I think — but there was a young lady on radio commercials who somehow managed to sound both discreet and seductive in her reminders that "We're approachable!" Toronto-Dominion, too, includes in its television spots a couple of sensational young ladies who'd bring the roses to the cheeks of any growing boy, like me.

If I seem more than merely bemused by all this it is because I am of that vintage that remembers banks every bit as intimidating as maximum security prisons. Any man or woman over the age of 45, asked to nominate the funniest piece of writing ever, would automatically select Stephen Leacock's account of his first terrified dealings with his bank. It seemed so funny because it was so true. Banks were places calculated to reduce any man to quivering jelly.

I can vividly recall, myself, the horrors of opening my first account in a gloomy mausolem long before Mary the First or Mary the Second was born. There were no approachable beauty queens volunteering to make things happen. There were only stern and suspicious old men in high, stiff collars, peering out at you accusingly through bars. Opening an account in that place with a grubby 10-dollar bill was like asking U.S. Steel to forge a bobby pin.

The whole atmosphere, whether accidental or contrived, had the effect of overwhelming the customer with the extreme respectability and staggering riches of the establishment. They cut you down right at the door to the tomb with a brass plaque announcing assets of nine hundred-billion dollars. From there on you felt as if you were one of Singer's Midgets. Nobody in the lower income classes, which, of course, included newspapermen, could really understand what banks did except maybe buy tenement buildings to evict widows and orphans.

Their image, indeed, was so conservative, so hostile that it was generally, if inaccurately, concluded that the only way to get a loan from one was to demonstrate, with collateral, that you hadn't the slightest need for one. My mother, far and away the world's worst handler of money, was forever going to the bucket-shop lenders who might charge you exhorbitant interest, but did so with such gallantry and warmth that it almost seemed a social visit.

"Come to think of it, that may have been the reason that banks decided to cultivate the come-hither look. My own bank — and I say "my" because my bank encourages that and I like to humor them — transformed overnight. Huge picture windows were installed in place of the marble walls. The walls were all painted an attractive pastel green, like antiqued bank notes. The heavy bars in front of the teller's wickets were torn out. The place looked as cheerful, as bright and as inviting as a florist shop. Almost immediately there was a rush of customers and armed robbers.

Lord only knows what happened to the mean, grey, hostile old men in the celluloid collars. Perhaps they were all put out to stud in the mint. But suddenly the place was full of attractive young ladies, like Mary, who had mastered the fine art of efficiency with charm.

"Here's five dollars for my account," you would say, crimsoning, "and I love you madly."

The managers, once selected for their funereal mien, were suddenly young and amiable men, singing out a cheerful good morning to you from offices with perpetually open doors. It was all you could do to refrain from leaping into their laps, blurting out your financial woes and having a good cry.

The most astonishing change of all was the attitude that banks began taking to money. It had become a commodity they were ready, indeed eager, to have you cart away. The Royal Bank's new Mary comes right out with it. Want a cottage? A swimming pool? A fibreglass run-about? A holiday in Tahiti? Well, we can help make it happen.

Even at "my" bank — hello, there, old bank! — there are a large number of cards and pamphlets placed at strategic points to remind you that all sorts of perfectly dandy things can be done with money.

It is, one must admit, a little confusing since half these cards urge you to save for the future and the other half urge you to cart a little of the product away and live for the moment. There are no free samples, mind you, but the idea is made very clear that they've a lot of the stuff lying around in vaults and, after all, somebody ought to be using it.

My neighbor, another dirty old man, is of the opinion that Mary Number One, who tells us that she is going back to school, was sacrificed by The Royal Bank because she was ahead of her time, simply too luscious to keep the customer's mind on money. One can see it would be a problem if more clients wanted Mary than the money, but that's the way banking goes, eh, kid?

SAFE ROBBER KNEW COMBINATION: RCMP

A number of people knew the combination to a safe at a Shop-Easy supermarket branch in Colwood which was robbed of $12,000 Monday night, Colwood RCMP said today.

Staff Sgt. Lloyd Smith said, "The safe was not attacked. The combination was obviously used."

The theft was reported by the store's branch manager, William Pugh, shortly after he discovered the money missing about 9 a.m. Tuesday. Most of the money was in $10 and $20 bills, Smith said.

The four feet by three feet safe, located in the customer shopping area, showed no signs of being forced open and neither did the premises, said Smith.

Teachers Reinstated

The first board of reference set up under new legislation for the review of dismissals of tenured school teachers has reinstated city teachers Bona McMurchie and Evelyn Ball.

"I'm very pleased," said Miss McMurchie, who taught with the Greater Victoria school board for 30 years. "It has been a most distressing affair which has done nothing to make my health any better."

Miss McMurchie, who describes herself as "in the 60s," said she had been absent from her Grade 5 class at Margaret Jenkins Elementary School for "months" as a result of a bout of 'flu.

She said she was then suspended and dismissed on grounds of "neglect of duty."

Miss Ball of Lampson Elementary was absent for the same period for the same reasons, Miss McMurchie said. The teachers share Miss McMurchie's house at 3825 Kremlin.

Miss McMurchie said neither she nor Miss Ball had any form of income during their period of dismissal.

"It was pretty devastating on my savings," she said.

Notice of suspension came on June 26; dismissal followed on July 15.

Miss McMurchie said she had still not fully recovered from her illness. Both women said their future in teaching was "up to the school board."

Greater Victoria School Board discussed the board of reference decision in closed session Tuesday night.

The teachers were the first in the province to appeal dismissals since new laws governing tenured teachers were passed by the government at the 1972 session of the legislature.

Under the terms of the amended Public Schools Act, a school board may discharge a teacher who they believe "has been guilty of misconduct, neglect of duty, or refusal to obey a lawful order of the board;" one who has been convicted of a criminal offence if they believe it "inadvisable" that he continue teaching; or one whom they believe is incompetent.

In the case of alleged incompetence, an appeal is lodged with an appointed review commission.

A board of reference's decision is final and binding upon both the teachers and the board involved. A vindicated teacher must be reinstated.

Tuesday's decision was handed down by board of reference chairman K. S. Fawcus of Vancouver.

Lost Boys Return Safely

Two 11-year-old Saanich boys who disappeared Monday afternoon returned to their homes about 7 p.m., Tuesday, too tired to even eat a meal, Saanich police said today.

Both Robert Munro of 2909 Richmond and Michael Wowchuk of 1936 Newton were back at school today.

Mrs. Munro said today the boys got lost while hiking and could not find their way back to their bicycles before dark. They are not certain where they were but she thinks it may have been in the vicinity of Mount Douglas Park.

Robert told her the pair sat against a tree in the woods most of Monday night. They were exhausted by the time they arrived home.

Aldermen Miffed About Trip Extras

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Before they left on a two-week civic tour of Europe last Saturday, each of the four official city representatives in the party received an extra $240 toward their expenses, the Times learned today.

The money, which was in addition to the $500 earlier approved by city council for each of the four air fares, was authorized at an informal coffee gathering following last Thursday's council meeting.

And at least two aldermen are unhappy about the way the extra money was allocated.

"We should have been told right at the outset what the trip was going to cost," Ald. Percy Frampton said today. "This request for more money shouldn't have been dropped suddenly in our laps like that."

Ald. Ove Witt said he understood the cash had been requested for three city hall officials only, and not for an alderman who was also in the party.

Ald. Tom Christie and the three officials — assistant planner Peter Crisp, traffic engineer Dave Campbell and comptroller Jim Bramley — received their $240 cheques last Friday, said assistant comptroller Mason Sheldrick.

He said the sum represented a per diem allowance of $15 for the 16-day trip.

No mention of the tour was made during the council meeting last week.

After the meetings, aldermen traditionally adjourn to the anteroom of the council chamber for coffee, and Witt said Mayor Peter Pollen raised the subject at that time last Thursday.

"Nothing was really approved, except that the mayor said he would like to tell us in advance that he would be formally asking us for the additional sum on his return."

(Pollen initiated and organized the tour, but is paying his own expenses.)

Shouldn't Be Penalized

Witt said Pollen told aldermen the trip was going to be "more expensive than we first anticipated," and he (Pollen) didn't consider it fair that those going in an official capacity should be financially penalized.

Council had originally authorized up to $3,500 toward the tour expenses, on the basis of $500 maximum per person, which would have enabled seven official representatives to go.

Only four eventually joined the party, making the city's subsidy of fares $2,000, and Witt said he told the mayor: "I can't see why you should have to ask again."

However, a "straw poll" was taken among the aldermen and approval received.

Witt said he was not aware at that time that the money would be issued in advance, although this is the practice when aldermen are going to such events as municipal conventions.

Frampton said when the subject was discussed over coffee some aldermen questioned the methods involved, particularly Ald. Alf Hood who complained that such matters have a habit of "cropping up at the last minute after formal approval has been given."

"I felt the same way, that at least we should have the whole picture all at one time," he added.

Frampton said the actual technique employed in this instance, of authorizing expenditure and issuing the money before formal approval of council, was one that had been used before.

At a later date, he said, it would amount to council "confirming the action of the committee of council."

Purpose of the tour is to enable planners, architects, developers and others interested in Victoria's development to study the urban planning of several European cities.

Curtis Against New Ice Rink

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said today he would not support at this time a proposed second skating rink for the municipality.

Curtis said Saanich needs extensive road and traffic improvements before embarking on a second phase of recreational development and doubted in any case that the proposal could be properly researched before the Dec. 9 election.

"I doubt that a referendum would succeed and I don't feel we should consider one particular facility in isolation. It does not have my support at this time," Curtis said.

Neither the mayor nor the municipal administrator were aware of such a proposal being put forward and Curtis said he felt it should have been referred to the full council. Four aldermen were present at the committee meeting: chairman Leslie Passmore, Alan Newberry, Fred Severson and William Noel.

The mayor felt the time inappropriate for proposing new recreational services of any kind. He said it had been his understanding and that of administrator John Tribe that council would see the completion of the fourth capital undertaking in the recreation field before considering the merits of another five-year program.

There is too little time to produce a cost estimate for another ice surface, Curtis said, acknowledging the heavy demand for more icetime at George Pearkes Arena.

"I am aware of the enthusiasm of community groups and Saanich Minor Hockey Association (for more icetime), but if we consider borrowing in the near future we should be thinking of major roads and improvements to the general traffic plan," Curtis said.

Concern Mounts Over Asbestos

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

A chest specialist in Victoria has warned that many workers in the city may be in danger of contacting a cancerous lung disease from their exposure to asbestos fibres.

The doctor, who wishes his name withheld for profession reasons, said he knew of at least two men in Victoria who died "very likely from the consequences of their exposure to asbestos."

He said he knew of several workers suffering from heavy exposure right now.

The disease is contracted by breathing the minute fibres, which remain in the body permanently and act as a constant irritant.

Effects of the inhalation may take as long as 20 to 30 years to detect.

"The problem of asbestos exposure is a complicated one," he said, "which has recently been under a great deal of study."

Asbestosis is a disease which leads to scarring on the lungs or the development of one of several kinds of tumors.

The scarring is not fatal in itself, causing only shortness of breath or disability, but tumors can cause death.

Dr. Irving Selikoff, an American cancer authority, recently revealed that a rare, late-showing and fatal form of the disease, mesothelioma, has been occuring with increasing frequency among shipyard workers.

Selikoff said as many as 225,000 of the 3.25 million persons still living who worked in U.S. shipyards during the Second World War may develop the disease because of the exposure to the fibres even if the exposure was only brief.

Insulation workers, carpenters, welders, electricians, tinsmiths, pipe laggers and other tradesmen whose work does not directly involve handling asbestos are also often exposed to significant amounts of asbestos.

The local physician said Canada is investigating the disease most intensely since 80 per cent of the world's asbestos is produced here.

"Prevention is of the essence," he said, "since no treatment for the disease is known.

"I'm personally troubled by the presence of this fibre and the slowness shown in taking precautions against it.

"But I don't want to raise a bogey man," he added, "and most men I've treated in Victoria are aware of the dangers."

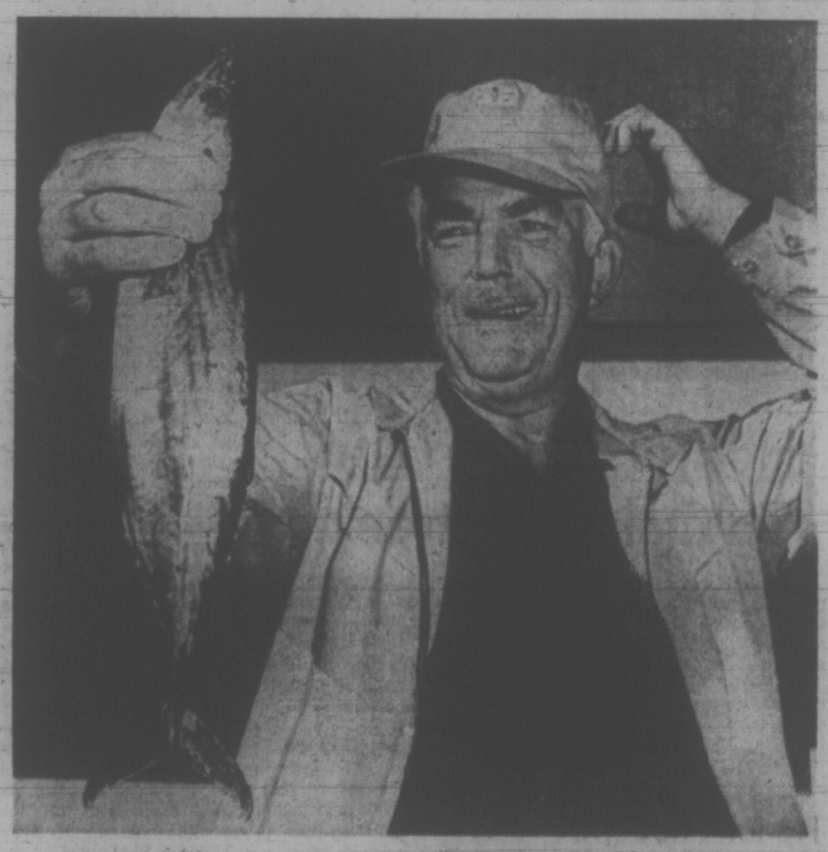

A spokesman for the Workman's Compensation Board said safety regulations were recently tightened for jobs with asbestos hazards.

It is the job of management and unions, he said, to warn employees of the risks involved in asbestos and to insure that proper safety practices, such as face masks, are followed.

The Victoria doctor said it is not only industrial workers who are affected and the populace at large may be in danger.

"A recent study has shown," he said, "that 50 to 60 per cent of people who come to autopsy will have asbestos fibres in their bodies. In New York the figure is 80 per cent.

"Dr. Selikoff has speculated that lung cancer may be caused from a combination of smoke and asbestos. He feels high instance of lung cancer coincides with high increases in the use of asbestos."

OFF-COURSE TUNA chomped Les Inglis' minnow teaser off Race Rocks early Tuesday morning. Federal fisheries officials said the bad navigator was definitely an albacore tuna from southern climes and suggested recent windy Pacific weather might have steered the fish into local waters. Inglis said the tuna was scrappier than a salmon of the same size.

Can Detroit Survive Playoff Victory?

By The Associated Press

Today's most pressing baseball puzzle is not which team will win the American League's East Division race but whether Tiger Stadium and Detroit can survive a possible playoff victory by the Tigers against Oakland Athletics.

When the Tigers clinched the pennant Tuesday night, 3-1 over Boston Red Sox, it set off a chaotic scene as the frantic fans spilled all over the field, tearing up the bases and turf and mobbing the jubilant players. Then they turned on downtown Kennedy Square.

Detroit finally ended the month-long tug-of-war that started with four teams, dwindled to three and finally two. And old Pro Al Kaline was the hero.

the 20-year veteran drove in the tie-breaking run with a seventh-inning single and then scored an insurance run on Carl Yastrzemski's error.

Elsewhere Tuesday night, West Division champion Oakland Athletics lost to California Angels 3-2, Texas Rangers shut out Kansas City Royals 3-0, Milwaukee Braves trimmed New York Yankees 3-2, Chicago White Sox edged Minnesota Twins 5-4 and Cleveland split a doubleheader with Baltimore Orioles, the Indians winning 6-5 before losing 4-3.

Cincinnati Redlegs and Pittsburgh Pirates both warmed up for the National League playoff by rolling to easy triumphs. The Pirates defeated St. Louis Cardinals 6-2 while the Reds trimmed Houston Astros 6-1.

In other National League games Philadelphia Phillies clouted Chicago Cubs 11-1; Los Angeles Dodgers nipped Atlanta Braves 6-5; New York Mets won a doubleheader from the Montreal Expos, 5-2 and 4-3 in 12 innings, and San Francisco Giants turned back San Diego Padres 7-4.

Firecrackers exploded as Kaline squeezed the ball for the out that made the Tigers East champions. The fans stormed over the field, celebrating wildly. When they left, Tiger Stadium was a mess with patches of grass gone and about 50 broken chairs littering the field.

Celebrating fans then cut loose in the downtown area, scuffled with police and threw bottles around Kennedy Square.

Police said at least 18 persons were arrested. "Perhaps an occasional bottle-thrower was arrested," one police officer said, "but I can't tell you how many."

Several other persons were reported injured, and while police confirmed there were injuries they were unable to ascertain the number. A policeman suffered a broken arm when a fan jumped on him trying to get to the Tiger dugout shortly after the game.

In the downtown area, a reporter saw several persons bleeding from head wounds, apparently received when struck by thrown objects.

There was only one confirmed report of looting from a smashed store window. But Kennedy Square was literally covered with glass from broken bottles.

Police said only a "few thousand" of the 50,553 fans that attended the game participated in the downtown disturbance.

Kaline was the man most responsible for the surge to the division pennant. His seventh-inning single gave the 37-year-old veteran 22 hits in his last 44 at bats.

"The older you get," he said, "the harder it is to get up for every game.

"But for the big ones like this, it's no problem at all."

"There's not a word I can say. All the superlatives . . . I would use them all. There aren't words to describe how he played," said Detroit manager Billy Martin.

Dick McAuliffe, whose first-inning error had given the Sox an unearned run, doubled off Luis Tiant with one out in the seventh and Kaline followed with a single. McAuliffe scored on the hit and Kaline raced to second on the play at the plate.

Bill Lee relieved Tiant and Duke Sims beat out a slow roller, sending Kaline to third. Norm Cash bounced to Carl Yastrzemski who dropped the ball as Kaline scored the insurance run.

"We have no apologies," said manager Eddie Kasko. "We battled them and nobody expected us to get as far as we did."

The Athletics, marking time till Saturday, bowed to California Tuesday night with Clyde Wright going all the way for the victory. John Stephenson drove in the winning run with a ninth-inning single.

Laycoe Likes What Kings Have in Goal

Hal Laycoe said he was enjoying his new job, but his eyes hinted: maybe.

Hal now is a vice-president in charge of player development with the Vancouver Canucks; and it was in that role that he was an interested spectator here a while ago.

But he seemed out of place up in the stands and not behind the Vancouver bench.

"Sure, I'm happy," he said. "Why not?"

Then he was back in form:

"Offside," he screamed at the linesman.

Besides, during the game as it progressed, Hal threw more than one bodycheck, and shouted warnings at the players.

It didn't come naturally to him to be sitting up there. Still he made numerous notes, and was doing it for a purpose: to chart each and every player, their habits and mistakes.

This would all go to coach Vic Stasiuk, who had replaced him at the end of last year. They would work together for the Canucks.

"You've got a small team," an inquiring reporter suggested.

"Yes, but they are quick," he said, "and can skate," he added of the Bobby Lalonde, Rom Himenuke and Richard Lemieux line.

"They've had a great camp," he said. Then a word of caution as befitting an astute observer. "But you always find it this way. Usually the small men dominate the early part of any training camp, and the bigger fellows come along later."

Not that Hal didn't think the line had promise. He always was a booster for little Lalonde, especially earlier last year, but it was lack of experience that finally caught up with him. "This year, he should make it," Laycoe said.

Youngsters Galore to Pick From

"Homenuke has been a pleasant surprise," Hal added, and "John Wright: he's been the find of the season so far."

If these are some of rated newcomers, the Canucks have plenty of youngsters. They only have four players left from the 20 they got through the NHL expansion draft. They are Dunc Wilson, Barry Wilkins, Orland Kurtenbach and Wayne Maki.

Some of the others — Rosaire Paiement, Paul Popiel, Wayne Connolly, George Gardner, have gone to the World Hockey Association. John Schella and Pat Quinn were lost through the intra-league draft.

This has left the lineup door wide open, and if the rookies have flocked through, take the case of Bobby Schmautz as the case of a veteran in point, and what the future might hold for him. Last year, Schmautz was considered expendable by the Canucks, and shipped to Rochester. This year he is the only experienced rightwinger on the team. That's one difference a year makes.

How has he been playing? Laycoe was asked.

"Terrible," was the answer. "He knows he has a job sewed up." Of course that was before Schmautz went on a tear, and scored four goals against Los Angeles, but to Laycoe it told the story of the Canuck right-wing situation.

Laycoe wouldn't comment on the Dunc Wilson case. Wilson, a goalkeeper, had been suspended for breaking training rules, and earlier had been quoted as saying that he would probably like the change in coaching this year, because he didn't get along too well with Laycoe last season.

So, it was obvious why Laycoe declined comment, and pointed instead to Bruce Bullock as a youngster with promise.

"He could be a good one," Laycoe said, "and he has played well in camp, and also here tonight. Besides, he's keen."

With Some Help, Could Be Tough

And whether Los Angeles Kings' general manager Larry Regan wants to hear it or not — he should — Laycoe also had some things to say about the Kings.

Nice things.

"They have fine goalkeeping," he declared. "In Vachon (Rotatien) and Edwards (Gary) they have as good a pair as anyone in the league.

"And I should know," he added. "You know how I keep statistics, and figures on everything, so I can know why things happen? Well, last year in one game against L.A. we got something like 37 face-offs in their end of the rink, and they got only seven in ours, and they won!

"And we never did beat them," Laycoe said of his particular nemesis.

"It was their goalkeeping, and with a better defence this year, they will be tough. That was their downfall last season."

Laycoe had spoken, as a coach. An ex-coach, sure, but still a coach. For when he was upgraded by the Canucks, one of his statements was:

"I'd be hypocritical if I said I was happy on this occasion . . . because I still feel I can coach in the NHL."

And knowing Hal, I know he hasn't changed his mind.

Hornets Put an End To Oak Bay Streak

Saanich Hornets erected a roadblock to halt an unbeaten streak by Oak Bay Invaders at six games Tuesday, clipping the league champions 29-14 in a Vancouver Island Bantam Football League encounter at Royal Athletic Park.

Invaders, however, 'scored an early-season 22-0 triumph over the runner-up Hornets and will collect the title even if they lose the final game of the regular schedule.

Glen Davies led Hornets with three touchdowns and quarterback Chris Grew scored the other major. Ed Murray kicked all four converts and got a single on a wide field-goal attempt.

Honor Alouette

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes officially retired sweater No. 63 Tuesday night and honored its longtime wearer, lineman Pierre Desjardins.

A GUT-BUSTER: Coach Mitch Pechet surveys members of his Victoria Cougars as they go through Russian-patterned exercise on Memorial Arena ice in preparation for Thursday night's Western Canada Hockey League opener in New Westminster. Besides getting chilled midriffs, players are supposed to acquire tighter stomach muscles. By lying down on the job now, Cougars hope to move up to playoff berth by time their 68-game regular WCHL schedule concludes in mid-March. See story on Page 15. (Times photo by Bill Halkett.)

Spavital proved himself a prophet, much to his regret, as the Lions got a field goal from Ted Gerela with 31 seconds remaining for a 26-24 victory over the Bombers before 20,513 fans.

A Bomber win would have been undeserved, as they were outplayed by the Lions, except in the second quarter, with Winnipeg quarterback Don Jonas and running back Mack Herron both having off nights.

Jonas clicked for three touchdown passes in the second quarter, two of them to Bob Larose and the other to Jim Thorpe, but was hurt by interceptions. Jonas also kicked a field goal and three converts.

The Lions got two touchdowns from Jim Evenson on short-yardage running plays, another on a pass from quarterback Don Moorhead to Jim Young, two field goals from Gerela and a pair of converts by the B.C. kicker.

The Lions showed signs of being tamed in the second quarter, but a key defensive change by coach Eagle Keys at half time seemed to baffle the Bombers.

"We switched to zone coverage on passes in the second half and it was highly effective," Keys said.

"We've been improving all the time and it was just a matter of time until we won one. We've played some good ball lately and most of our games could have gone either way."

The Lions now are 3-8 on the season, the exact reverse of the Bombers. Winnipeg holds down first place in the West by a one-game margin over Edmonton Eskimos. The Lions are last, one game behind Calgary Stampeders.

Moorhead, who was good on 15 of 26 passes, made the key play leading to Gerela's winning field goal.

With the ball on the B.C. 14, he fired a 52-yard strike to Young which brought the ball into the Winnipeg end of the field.

Moorhead then went back to his running game, utilizing Evenson, Monroe Eley and Johnny Musso to bring the ball down to the Winnipeg 13, making Gerela's field goal almost a sure thing.

The Lions won the battle in the trenches, consistently dominating the Winnipeg defensive front four when B.C. had the ball, and shutting down the Winnipeg running attack while on defence.

Herron, who personally destroyed the Lions in earlier 39-7 and 42-7 wins by the Bombers, was held to only 74 yards rushing on 18 carries, with his longest gain only nine yards.

Esks Running Out of Bodies

MONTREAL (CP) — Sam Etcheverry insists it's still too early to start talking about Montreal Alouettes repeating their 1970 performance and winding up with the Grey Cup.

But Edmonton coach Ray Jauch appears to have a problem today other than reaching the national final. He must be wondering where he'll find enough able bodies to finish out the Western Football Conference regular season first.

Etcheverry's club took a positive step in the direction of the Eastern Football Conference playoffs Tuesday night when the Als literally walloped Jauch's injury-plagued Eskimos 29-13 in a rough Canadian Football League interlocking game before 11,718 fans.

Moses Denson led the Montreal attack as he bulled over from the one-yard line in the first quarter and then broke a series of tackles to score his second touchdown of the game—27 yards up the sidelines—in the final quarter.

Ike Brown, Denson's running mate in the Montreal backfield most of the night, ran over from the three-yard line early in the opening quarter, while split end John Eason grabbed a 47-yard pass from Sonny Wade in the first half for the fourth Montreal major.

Montreal place kicker Don Sweet booted three converts and added a pair of singles on missed field goals to round out the Montreal scoring.

Edmonton fullback Sam Scarber scored the Eskimos' first touchdown on a one-yard run at 1:09 of the second quarter, while tight end Tyrone Walls counted the other on a 28-yard reception from quarterback Tom Wilkinson in the third. Dave Cutler, Edmonton's usually-reliable place kicker, managed one convert, but missed two field goal tries.

The Alouettes, notorious this season for the number of turnovers they have given up to opposing teams, turned things around against the Eskimos. Montreal defenders grabbed off five Edmonton passes—four from Wilkinson and one from Dave Syme.

Syme replaced Wilkinson late in the fourth quarter when the latter suffered a bruised ankle. Wilkinson stumbled over a water pipe at the edge of the field after being run out of bounds on a play.

While Wilkinson's injury appeared to be minor, Jauch could not take three others so lightly.

Scarber, fresh from the 30-day injury list, re-damaged his right shoulder, while centre Chip Kell suffered an injury to his right knee during the first half. Kell was taken to hospital by ambulance following the game, but was expected to be released in time to return with the team to Edmonton this morning. To add to Jauch's worries, backup fullback Bob MacGregor suffered a broken collarbone.

ROYALS GO SOUR ON LEMON

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Kansas City Royals dismissed Bob Lemon as manager Tuesday and replaced him with Jack McKeon, manager of the American League baseball club's Omaha farm team.

Owner Ewing Kauffman made the announcement at a news conference and said Lemon would manage the Royals through their final series of the season, against Texas Rangers, ending tonight.

Kauffman, flanked by the outgoing and incoming managers and Cedric Tallis, executive vice-president and general manager, said Lemon was dismissed because "I want a younger manager," and "I did not want to lose McKeon from our organization."

McKeon is 41, Lemon 52.

"During the next 10 years," Kauffman said, "I expect to win at least five out of 10 penants.

To do that, he said, it would be necessary to establish continuity of management, which Lemon would be unable to provide.

McKeon, however, was given a one-year contract, like everyone else in the Royals' organization.

Summer Was Busy Time For Branch Personnel

Summer wasn't, by any stretch of the imagination, a time of leisure for personnel in the provincial fish and wildlife branch.

In addition to participating in another sea otter transplant on the northwest coast of Vancouver Island, branch officials carried out a second release of juvenile Canada geese in the Nimpkish Valley area.

The program, aimed at re-introducing the species to the region, began with the transplant of 22 goslings to Klakakama Lake in 1971. This summer, a further 18 birds were set free.

Juvenile geese are used in the transplants because the adults tend to return to their previous territory. Since Canada geese normally do not nest before their second year, it is hoped that the first transplants will raise broods in the area next spring after returning from the south.

Anyone sighting these birds, easily identified by their red plastic collars, is asked to report particulars — including collar numbers if possible — to the nearest branch office.

Information received from the public indicates that at least 11 of the original transplanted birds survived the winter and only two are definitely reported to be dead.

Ruffed grouse, too, came up for relocation this summer.

Eleven birds, pen-reared on the Island, were released into a suitable "closed" area on Texada Island during the latter part of August.

Texada had a population of blue grouse but supported no "willows" prior to the move.

Another item under the general topic of wildlife management involved a joint meeting between branch officials from the Vancouver Island and Lower Mainland regions and representatives from the B.C. forest service's Vancouver district.

The meeting resulted in formulation of certain ground rules for the timber sale referral system and it was felt that more time and energy must be diverted to this program if a truly integrated land use is to be achieved in this province.

A general fishing survey is now winding up on lakes in the Greater Victoria area with an eye toward more intensive management.

Included in the vast amount of data required is information on land status around the lakes, fish population evaluations, available spawning habitat, general limnological considerations and angler use.

Initial investigations confirm that these lakes have tremendous recreational fishing potential, within easy reach of a large centre of population, but "few have adequate access."

Without this feature, a balanced integrated management program is impossible to implement.

A monthly branch newsletter reports:

"Access to fishing waters on Vancouver Island has been a problem for many years and, although much improvement has occurred in the last 15 years or so, the problem is still important. Many lakes in the Victoria area have either inadequate access or no public access at all.

"The problem is not so acute on the rest of the Island but some logging companies who, in total, control access to much fishing water, still maintain unnecessary gates and obstructions. This control over access during warm weather at times seriously limits recreational use of lakes and streams."

Amen!

With increasing number of man-hours becoming available for recreation of all sorts, it seems incredible that there is no adquate overall access policy at present.

Some timber companies are bending with the wind but others continue to drag their collective heels.

Wheat Kings Say Goodbye To Old Rink

BRANDON (CP) — Brandon Wheat Kings successfully closed Man-Ex Arean Tuesday night with a 6-2 Western Canada Hockey League exhibition victory over Flin Flon Bombers.

The Kings will move into the new Keystone Centre with their first home game Oct. 18.

The Kings scored four second-period goals to hand Flin Flon its first exhibition loss in eight games. Rick Blight had two goals for Brandon with Grant Thomson, Clark Lang, Dwayne Pentland and Robbie Neale each scoring once.

Ray Maluta, in the second period, and Ron Andruff, in the third, scored for Flin Flon.

Hit Parade

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The 1972 Pittsburgh Pirates are the first team in major league baseball history to have nine players collect more than 100 hits each in a single season.

The players are Gene Clines, Rennie Stennett, Dave Cash, Roberto Clemente, Richie Hebner, Willie Stargell, Manny Sanguillen, Al Oliver and Vic Davalillo.

Two Shutouts

St. Michael's University School shut out visiting Lansdowne 37-0 in another exhibition tussle Monday.

Cats Have Playoff Ideas

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Victoria Cougars expect improvement, Regina Pats and Medicine Hat Tigers rate as the major threats, and the over-all balance of power appears to have shifted from the West to the Eastern Division.

That seems to be the early assessment of the Western Canada Major Junior Hockey League as the 12-team, four-province circuit prepares to part the curtain for its 1972-73 campaign.

For Victoria Cougars, who open Thursday night against the Bruins in New Westminster, this is season No. 2.

No. 1 was not without problems. There were constant player changes and one even of coaching, with Mitch Pechet taking over from Fred Hucul last January. Still, the first-year Cougars won 18 games, tied two and lost 19 one-goal decisions.

Sights Are Higher

They missed the Western Division playoffs by a wide margin, but wound up in fifth place, one notch ahead of another expansion team, Vancouver Nats.

The sights are higher, naturally, this time around. Meaning, of course, at least fourth and the playoff round.

Petchet remains, but player changes continued in preseason weeks. When the team completed its 1971-72 schedule, the Victoria roster contained 13 players eligible to make it through to campaign No. 2.

The holdovers were backup goalie Rick Tkalcic, defencemen George Pesut, Jim Atamanenko, Murray Worley, Blake Robinson; utility Carl Cureatz, and forwards Perry and Greg Robinson, Reg Malinoski, Jerry Dudar, Ron Poole, Tim Struch and Al McLaren.

Pre-season trades, releases and suspensions, in addition to the assigning of Atamanenko, Cureatz and Poole to the Nanaimo affiliate in the B.C. Junior League have reduced Pechet's holdover stock to three — Blake Robinson, Worley and McLaren.

With the graduation of Darryl Fedorak, and even with Tklacic's return, it was expected that goaltending would be a major question mark in Cougars' fortunes. It became even more so when Tkalcic, also assigned to Nanaimo after a disappointing training camp, balked at playing on the farm and was suspended.

But the play of 15-year-old Dan Rogers has been a pleasant surprise, and the goaltending problem appeared to be solved in part, earlier this week when Cougars acquired 19-year-old Sam Clegg from Saskatoon Blades.

In addition to Rogers, the forwards also have provided some pleasant surprises. Over-all, they show more size, greater mobility and better skating than last year's attackers.

Need 250 Goals

None of Victoria's forwards stands out as an individual great along the lines of a Lorne Henning or a Dennis Sobchuk. It seems, instead, a collection that must rely on teamwork.

The Cougars counted 215 goals in their 68 games last year. Chief scout Bob Briscoe, who draws credit from Pechet for introducing "some pleasant surprises" to the Victoria cause, feels the minimum requirement for a playoff berth "will have to be at least 250 goals."

If the goalies come through, defensive improvement will be aided and abetted by defencemen. But where it once seemed Cougars would return with a set defence, it now becomes obvious the bluelines are another Victoria question mark.

Still Some Questions

Through their actions in sending Atamanenko and Cureatz to Nanaimo, Pechet and general manager Eric Bishop must feel they have managed defensive improvement, however untried and unproven.

Cougars still have too many question marks to be considered a threat for league honors. Pechet insists the team will be competitive and, quite naturally, feels "we'll have a good shot" at making the playoffs.

To do it, Victoria must stay ahead of Vancouver and overhaul, possibly, New Westminster. Of all Western Division teams, the Bruins have been hit hardest by the age limit. In firepower alone, they lost 200 goals with the graduation of Henning (51), Bernie Lukowich (37), Alex Kogler (43), Ken Ireland (27), Don Martineau (25) and Les Jackson (17).

Edmonton Oil Kings likely will settle into third place and Calgary Centennials, last year's divisional champions, will have the best goaltending in the league in John Davidson and will wind up in second.

Medicine Hat should be the team on the top when the schedule closes in March. The goal-scoring terrors of the league, points scoring champ Tom Lysiak (47 goals, 97 assists) is returning along with Lanny McDonald, who banged in 50 goals.

There is a suspicion that if Tigers don't win the league this year, those arden Medicine Hat fans will demand a saliva test.

Regina Stacked

Turner won't have many problems next year, either, because Regina is very short of graduating juniors. Only two of the Pats' key players are heading into their draft year. That doesn't include the very stylish Sobchuk, who has two years left.

There is talent, too, in Saskatoon but with a difference. Whereas Pats built with one eye on the future, Jack McLeod and the Blades will "go for broke" this year. Their holdovers are many, but Saskatoon is top-heavy with draftable players and that edge in experience may force Pats to work hard in defence of Eastern Division honors.

Nor should Brandon Wheat Kings, moving into a sparkling new 5,000-seat building, be far off the pace. Stylish holdovers like Dwayne Pentland; Ron Chipperfield and Robbie Neale will produce in a big way for Rudy Pilous.

Brandon, however, had had goaltending problems of a major nature. Pilous managed to deal for Jim Rankin, via Vancouver, but Nats' backup man of last season hasn't as yet proven to be the answer.

Patty Ginnell and Flin Flon Bombers, as always, can't be called anybody's cousins. They should breeze into the playoffs ahead of Swift Current Broncos, who are returning with several holdovers.

Bianchin Sizzling

Blaine Stoughton and Al Hillier are back to lead Flin Flon's attackers along with Nanaimo-reared Wayne Bianchin. Dealt to the Bombers by Cougars last season. Bianchin has been the pre-season sensation with 14 goals in Flin Flon's seven successful exhibitions.

Winnipeg will remain sixth and hockey's No. 1 puzzle. The town with one of Canada's best minor programs boasts a team with the worst road record in the WCHL. The Jets may not change, and may have trouble catching Swift Current in order to stay out of the cellar.

Six Victoria Players On B.C. Team

Six Victoria players are on the British Columbia team in the Canadian women's field hockey championships in Montreal next Sunday to Wednesday.

Gulls, Nixons Win Openers

Brian McLauchlan connected for a power-play goal at 18:07 of the third period Tuesday night to give Juan de Fuca Gulls a 5-4 victory over Racquet Club Kings in a Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game at Juan de Fuca Arena.

In another game, Victoria Nixons bounced Esquimalt A and W, 10-4.

Steve Hansen, Barry Hilton, Dave Archibald and Al Hardy were the other Gull scorers. Richie Gook, Craig Palin, Mel Bridgeman and Perry Carrigan replied for Kings.

Team-power was evident in the Victoria win where nine players shared in the scoring. Grant Peart led Nixons with two goals while singles were added by Butch Morey, Steve Leatham, Norm Allen, Jamie Robertson, Lorry Gloeckner, Ron Fritz, Ken Davison and Kerry Blain.

Bruins After Sinden

BOSTON (AP) — Harry Sinden, who coached Boston Bruins to the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup in 1970, then quit to sell prefabricated homes, may be returning to his old team.

The Bruins said Tuesday that they have been negotiating with Sinden to take a job in their organization. A team spokesman said, however, that he was "100 per cent certain" that Sinden would not be returning as coach. Tom Johnson is under contract for that job, as well he might be after leading the Bruins to the 1972 Stanley Cup.

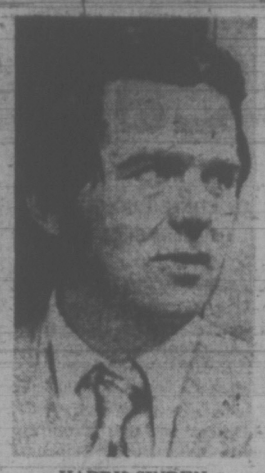

"We've talked to Harry about coming back," said Weston Adams, the team's president, "but I can't say that he's coming back with us because it simply hasn't been decided yet."

Sinden, reached in New York upon his return from coaching Team Canada against the Russians, said: "I haven't made up my mind yet what my next job will be. I have more than one opportunity and I want to weigh all of them before I make my decision."

There had been reports that Sinden would come back as general manager, replacing Milt Schmidt, but Adams denied that theory.

"We certainly don't intend to kick Milt upstairs," he said. "We're perfectly satisfied with the job he's done as general manager.

"Besides, with expansion, the Braves (the Bruins' American Hockey League affiliate), the new league and everything else, the front office is twice as busy as ever before. So there should be a place in our organization for a talented guy like Sinden."

Calling UVic Grads

The coach of the University of Victoria Vikings is heading a planned reunion of all former players with UVic and its predecessors, Victoria College and Victoria Normal School.

The reunion will take the form of a dinner and smoker Friday, Nov. 3, and is part of UVic's opening weekend which also includes a clinic Saturday afternoon and an inter-squad game at UVic gym Saturday night.

Jack Donhue, a former New Yorker who is Canada's national basketball coach, will be the featured speaker Friday and will conduct the clinic Saturday.

"We've got 251 names of players going back to 1925," Taylor said Tuesday night at the athletic department's press reception at the Faculty Club lounge. "We've mailed out about 150 letters."

"But there are 100 players whose addresses we don't have and we'd like to hear from them," he added.

Anyone who hasn't heard from Taylor can reach him at Lansdowne Junior High School or through the UVic athletic department.

Seniors Compete Friday

It will be "Bob Mayhew Day" at the Uplands course Friday as more than 100 members of the Vancouver Island Seniors' Golf Association play in their final competition of the season.

USED OVER-AGE PLAYERS, SOCCER TEAMS PENALIZED

Victoria Tyees and Mount View Hornets both lost three points as a result of using overage players in the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League.

Ash Valdal of Tyees and Joe Bekkers of Hornets, the coaches, discovered older players on their teams after the fifth matches, dropped the offenders and reported the fact to league officials.

League rules stipulate that players must be under 19 on Jan. 1, 1973.

At a meeting of all coaches, it was ruled that each team should lose three points. Tyees could have lost a maximum of seven points and Hornets could have been bounced back six.

The decision left Tyees, the reigning B.C. champions, one point behind leading Oak Bay and one point ahead of Claremont in the battle for one of two playoff berths and a chance to defend the provincial crown.

Tyees have won five and drawn one in six matches this season.

Hornets, runner-up to Tyees in the playoff last year, fell back to seventh place in the eight-team league with three points.

MONKEY TEST STROKE AID

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — A memory-taxing exercise for smart monkeys may be the key to ultimately developing a surgical treatment for language loss in stroke victims, a scientist reports.

For the last year, Dr. James Dewson III, head of the hearing and speech sciences section of the division of tolaryngology at the Stanford Medical School, has been teaching 13 monkeys to recognize sounds and to push color buttons to test their memories.

Through this system of measuring a monkey's short-range memory capacity, Dr. Dewson said he hopes eventually to determine why memory is impaired after a stroke damages the language-specializing part of the brain.

"The monkeys are still in training," Dr. Dewson said in an interview Tuesday. "It's fascinating. A lot of people, my colleagues, said it couldn't be done."

Working under a $75,000 National Science Foundation grant at a Palo Alto Veterans Hospital laboratory, he first trained the animals to recognize sequence of tones and noises in a complex exercise demanding some thinking.

To obtain food, the monkeys must listen to a randon sequence of two sounds from a loudspeaker, then press a red and a green lighted button, matching the color sequences to the sound sequences. They were taught previously that one sound is correctly matched by pressing red and the other by pressing green.

Within four months, Dr. Dewson said he will perform an operation on one of the monkeys, surgically inducing a "stroke" on one side of the brain.

Dewson said a second operation would be undertaken to remove interference caused by the stroke damage and to determine if such surgery would allow the undamaged part of the brain to assume language functions.

Normally, he explained, only the major hemisphere of the human brain apparently deals with language. Recent research has suggested, Dr. Dewson added, that both sides of the animal brain work equally well in memory, which is not true of humans.

Labor Would Re-Negotiate ECM Terms

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — The opposition Labor party today bound any future government it forms to seek sweeping new terms for Britain's continued membership in the European Common Market.

But the demands were so tough that it seemed immediately clear they would stand little chance of acceptance by existing members of the trade and economic bloc.

The decision at the party's annual convention represented a triumph for former prime minister Harold Wilson who long has argued for Britian's entry as long as the conditions are deemed right.

But it was a hairline triumph barely won because in one dramatic vote Wilson and his fellow leaders only just defeated a resolution that would have committed the Labor movement to a declaration of "complete opposition to entry into the Common Market on any terms."

This call was voted down by 3,076,999 to 2,958,000 — or a margin of a mere 118,000 in a party that has a registered membership of 6.3 million.

Delegates at party conventions vote for the members of their local rank-and-file branches or on behalf of the big labor unions whose paid up memberships run into hundreds of thousands.

Altogether, the convention voted four times, on different statements, in order to establish whether a future Labor government should keep Britian in or lead Britian out of the Common Market.

In the first vote, the convention endorsed a policy statement of the party's national executive committee.

This accepted the principle of British membership but on entirely new terms.

Another Market policy on agriculture is wanted. Fairer financing arrangements are urged.

Control of Britian's home economic and political affairs must remain vested in Parliament and not switched to the Brussels headquarters of the Market.

Then, whether renegotiations succeeded or failed, the results would be put to a test of a popular ballot to establish if the country wanted to stay in or walk out.

In the second vote, the convention rejected a proposal that Britian should stay in the Market on existing terms and then try to work for socialist programs from inside.

In the third vote the convention accepted a resolution that went a lot further than the past official position of the party leaders.

Doctors to Visit

TORONTO (CP) — Thirteen Chinese doctors will arrive in Canada Nov. 1 for a 12-day tour of major medical centres as guests of the Canadian Medical Association, a CMA spokesman said Monday.

The spokesman said the CMA hopes the doctors will demonstrate the use of acupuncture during their visit, but that decision will be left up to the Chinese visitors.

The delegation will be led by Dr. Wu Wey-jan, vice-president of the Chinese Surgical Society. The group currently is touring the United States.

The CMA spokesman said the tour itinerary for the Canadian visit has not been completed.

Hoffa: I Saw 4 Jail Murders

TORONTO (CP) — James Hoffa, former Teamsters' Union boss, said on a television talk show Tuesday night that he witnessed four murders during his 57 months at a maximum-security prison in Lewisburg, Pa.

He told Pierre Berton, the show's host, that prison officials are helpless to stop these slayings.

Hoffa also said homosexuality is widespread and gang rape is a popular prison sport. He said young prisoners are often pulled into cells as they walk down the hallway and raped at knife-point.

Hoffa, 59, has been attacking the "dehumanizing" conditions in prisons since his release on parole last December after serving less than five years of a 13-year sentence for mail and wire fraud and jury tampering.

He continued to lead the two-million member union from his prison cell until June, 1971, when he resigned as a condition of his parole.

Poison Gas Hits Hamburg

HAMBURG, Germany (UPI) — Poison gases from Europe's largest copper works drifted through evening rush hour traffic Tuesday, causing nausea among pedestrians.

Police put out a city-wide alarm, but a fire department spokesman said the seeping gases — sulphur-dioxide and sulphur-trioxide—never presented a serious danger. Hamburg hospitals reported treating persons for nausea and inflamation of the throat, but no one was reported in serious condition.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Sign language was used in Provincial court Tuesday when a 55-year-old deaf and dumb woman pleaded guilty to a charge of theft under $200.

An interpreter, Sgt. AL Harwood from Victoria police force, was called to convey the details of the trial to Anna C. Cuming, of 3019 Carroll, who was apprehended by a downtown store security officer after shoplifting two shirts and a pair of slacks valued at $27.94.

"There was obviously premeditation involved," said prosecutor John Macintyre. He explained the woman left the store after placing the two shirts in a bag. She then returned with another bag and stole the slacks.

The woman's employer, Mrs. V. Harris, was called as a character witness by defence counsel Mike Hutchison who asked why she had hired the woman.

Mrs. Harris, who with her husband operates a dry-cleaning business, replied, "my husband had been told that handicapped people made good pressers because they didn't talk and they concentrated on the work."

She told the court the accused earned a net wage of about $228 a month.

She said Cuming's mother died a few months before the offence and she believed it "was out of her character" to commit the offence.

She said the woman would be allowed to continue her employment regardless of the shoplifting conviction.

Hutchison said the woman's "loneliness' due to her "inability to communicate" and the loss of her mother should be taken into consideration. He said "a fine of any size" would be inappropriate considering her income.

"I do observe that she's earning a take-home pay of $228," said Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre.

"It wasn't a case of a frightened, shy, middle-aged woman. This was planned deliberately by the accused," said St. Jorre.

He fined her $200.

Another shoplifter, Bennett Sam, 56, of 9 Cooper Road, was fined $200 for stealing a jacket worth $22.50 from a downtown store Sept. 23.

He was apprehended by Victoria police in a beer parlor shortly after the offence occurred. He said he was going to sell it for $3.

He was fined an additional $50 for failing to appear in court Sept. 25.

Stewart Appeal Rejected

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada Tuesday refused leave to appeal the 1971 conviction of Dr. Glen Stewart on a charge of non-capital murder.

Stewart was convicted by a jury trial of killing Gordon Kralt in October, 1970, at Barnfield.

Stewart's application argued that a new trial is necessary to introduce new evidence, but the Supreme Court upheld the decision of the British Columbia Court of Appeal that the new evidence is of minimal relevance and could not affect the verdict.

Court Battle Looms Over Alimony

OTTAWA (CP) — What started early this year as a dispute over alimony payments between a divorced Vancouver couple is threatening to turn into a full-scale constitutional issue before the Supreme Court of Canada.

The court's ultimate decision could nullify the power of judges to order maintenance payments under the federal Divorce Act. That would leave the provinces with the responsibility of drafting a complete set of laws dealing with alimony, child custody and other associated matters of divorce action.

Tuesday, the court decided to hear an appeal by Josephine Zacks against a ruling of the British Columbia Court of Appeal which had the effect of cutting off her support payments. The B.C. court ruled that her former husband, Louis Zacks, does not have to pay the $1,020 monthly payments ordered by the provincial divorce registrar because the maintenance order was not issued until the divorce already had been declared absolute.

In allowing the appeal, the Supreme Court agreed with Mrs. Zacks that the B.C. court had based its decision on unclear wording in the Divorce Act and it should be examined thoroughly at the highest level.

Zack's lawyer, Neil Fleischman of Vancouver, is hoping to fight the appeal on the grounds that the federal Divorce Act is unconstitutional.

His contention is that the British North America Act grants the federal government power over divorce, but is silent on all associated matters relating to the dissolution of a marriage. Alimony, child custody and similar problems arising from a divorce are, he says, a provincial responsibility.

Burial Chiselling Charged in Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Disciplinary charges will be laid against a Toronto undertaker under the Embalmers and Funeral Directors Act of using inadequate procedures in the burial of unclaimed bodies, Metropolitan Toronto council was told Tuesday.

Donald Teenson, registrar of the board of administration under the act, said no similar disciplinary action has been taken in Ontario for at least 15 years.

He said the charges deal with the material used in the coffins and the way the burial was performed.

John Anderson, social services commissioner for Metro, said the charges deal with Type A funerals, for which the $177 cost is equally shared by the provincial and municipal governments. They provide burial in a one-inch-thick silk-lined pine box with grey covering and without service or flowers.

Type A funerals are usually provided when the deceased has no money and his body is unclaimed.

Controller Mel Lastman of North York demanded an investigation into burial practices for unclaimed bodies. He said that in some cases boxes resembling orange crates are used, boxes are not nailed down and bodies are placed three in one plot.

The More You Tell— The More You Sell in the "Welcome Medium"

Beware, You Singles!

By ANN BLACKMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — You don't have to be married to seek out a marriage counsellor.

From Boston to Beverly Hills, psychiatrists and counsellors say that within the last year unmarried couples have been beating a track to their doors in unprecedented numbers.

"The principal reason they come is that most people who live together become emotionally involved and don't know how to break up," said Jarle Brors, founder of the Institute of Marriage and Family Relations in Washington.

Brors was among more than two dozen family counsellors questioned in a survey of seven metropolitan areas—Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles, New York, St. Louis and Washington. All said their practices now include unmarried couples who live together.

TIES STILL BIND

"The understanding when they live together is that they're free," Brors said. "But it doesn't usually work that way. It's not much different from marriage except that in one case they have a ring and in one they don't."

Peter and Pat, two college students from New York, had been living together about a year.

Peter insisted he loved Pat and considered their relationship permanent, but he was not yet ready to get married," said the counsellor.

"Pat was. After numerous arguments, they went to a family counsellor. After four sessions, they split up.

"It became clear that neither of them felt comfortable together. After the first session il came out that he did what he damn well pleased, and she felt used, that it was nothing more than a convenience for him."

WEARS THIN

Many of the counsellors said that the intrigue of living together without marriage sometimes wears thin after awhile.

"It's like trying to live with something the spirit doesn't go along with," said Joseph LaLiberte, supervisor of the Boston office of the Family Counselling Guidance Centre, Inc. "Despite the surface coolness and sophistication, they recognize the importance of a sustained commitment. It goes back to a primary need. It's been a part of them for so many years."

Some counsellors said that unmarried couples often seek help in reaction to disapproval from family or neighbors.

"Some are afraid of their image and hide the fact they're not married," said Dr. Leopold L. Waulder, a clinical psychologist in Greenbelt, Md. "The fact that it's a relatively new phenomenon makes it difficult. Some people try to experiment with new kinds of social relationships, but they also have ties with the past."

DETROIT ZOO GETS INTO ACT with four new tiger cubs — Billy, Mickey, Woodie and Joe. Almost any Detroit Tiger fan can figure out who they are named for but, in case you haven't guessed zoo director Dr. Robert F. Wilson named them after Tiger manager Billy Martin, pitcher Mickey Lolich, pitcher Woodie Fryman and pitcher Joe Coleman. The Detroit Tigers won the American league east title as they defeated the Boston Red Sox 3-1 Tuesday night. (AP Wirephoto)

Old Montreal Comes to Fore In Latter-Day Restoration

MONTREAL (CP) — A few surprises awaited Lucien Lemieux and his two partners when they undertook to restore an old building in Old Montreal.

Among them was part of the original fortifications of Old Montreal—an irregular column of stone and mortar rising 18 feet up the cellar wall from the sub-basement.

"The stone walls were built in 1717 to protect the Montreal settlement, then some 72 years old," said Mr. Lemieux as he led the way to the dimly-lit cellar. "The city commissioners ordered the walls demolished in 1827 and I guess people just built right on top of them."

Other surprises were the discovery of two stone arches and a wall believed to have been part of officers' quarters inside the old walls as well as the foundations of a house uncovered in another part of the cellar.

Once a dilapidated fruit warehouse, the 135-year-old building is one of many getting a face-lift in Old Montreal—original site of the city founded in 1642 by the Sieur de Maisonneuve with a small band of men and women. The area was declared a historical site by the provincial government in 1964 and since then more than 85 historical buildings have been restored.

Home Recipe Plan Takes Off Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

AL BAILEY SAYS:
• The most common complaint about the eating quantities of turkey meat is that it is too dry and sometimes tough to chew.
• This is usually due to the evaporation of its main tenderizing ingerdient (moisture): by cooking at too high a temperature.
• Therefore, to ensure tenderness, juicyness and minimum shrinkage cook your turkey at 275 deg. to 280 deg. F.

GALLUP POLL

Stanfield Image: 24% Undecided

By THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

Hardworking, intelligent, honest — those are the three words which most Canadians think best delineate Robert Stanfield, Conservative Leader. About three in ten voters choose each word as most descriptive of the man. Close to these attributes are two others, straightforward and reasonable, each picked by about two in ten voters.

Less than one in ten find Mr. Stanfield's best description in the word "interesting." Less than one in 20 find him either arrogant or quick-tempered.

About one-fourth of the voters (24%) cannot make up their minds which of eight words best portray the Opposition Leader.

Mr. Stanfield makes an almost identical impact on men as on women voters, with the exception that women appear a little more likely to think of him as hardworking than are men.

To establish these images, Gallop interviewers handed a card to those selected for interviewing, containing eight adjectives and asked:

"IN GENERAL WHICH OF THE WORDS ON THIS CARD DO YOU THINK BEST DESCRIBES MR. STANFIELD, CONSERVATIVE LEADER."

The study was conducted with a sample of 721 adults in mid-July, during interviews at home. A sample of this size produces results accurate within a four per cent margin of error 19 out of 20 times.

The table below shows how the nation thinks, as compared to men and women. The columns add to more than 100% as many people selected two or more words as descriptive of the PC leader.

	CANADA	Men	Women
Hardworking	31%	28%	33%
Intelligent	29	29	29
Honest	27	25	29
Straightforward	21	21	20
Reasonable	18	18	18
Interesting	9	10	8
Arrogant	5	5	6
Quick-tempered	4	3	6
Can't say	24	23	25
	168%	162%	174%

In a similar study, Mr. Trudeau was given a very different image. Compared to the choices for Mr. Stanfield, 54% selected "Intelligent" as best describing the PM, followed by arrogant (30%), quick-tempered (28%), and interesting (25%). While the top description for Mr. Stanfield is "hardworking" it is at the bottom of Mr. Trudeau's list (14%).

NEW RECREATION director of the Cowichan Indian Band, Jennifer Williams, is a former B.C. Indian Princess and Duncan's 1970 beauty queen. Miss Williams, 20, replaces Leonard Andrew, who held the position for the past three years. Since graduating from St. Ann's Academy in Victoria two years ago Miss Williams has worked for the T. Eaton Company in Duncan, the Imperial Bank of Commerce and Cowichan Community Television.

Aides Named

The appointment of Donald Jantzen to the post of executive assistant to the minister of municipal affairs has been announced by the NDP government.

Jantzen will serve on the staff of James Lorimer at a salary of $1,335 per month.

Also included in the list of orders-in-council from Monday's meeting of the provincial cabinet were the appointments of administrative officers in the departments of education and highways.

Joining the staff of Education Minister Eileen Dailly will be Heather May Freeze. John Mika will serve on the staff of Highways Minister Robert Strachan.

Salaries for Freeze and Mika will also be $1,335 per month.

Research May Save White Pine From Fatal Parasite Disease

The stately white pine, previously considered doomed because of a parasite known as "blister-rust," may get a new lease on life.

Dr. Donald R. McDonald, program manager of forest protection with the federal Pacific Forest Research Centre on Burnside, said scientists are working on "new leads" which may solve the problem of the blister disease.

The disease has wiped out millions of white pines in British Columbia and in other parts of Canada and the United States.

One of the most promising leads is from the U.S. Forest Service in Montana working on a genetic program to produce disease-resistant trees through the process of selection and crossing various varieties, he said.

Some of the Montana seedlings have been transplanted to a disease garden on the mainland to determine whether they are really immune to factors causing blister rust, he said.

A scientist is also conducting an analysis of the status of the disease in British Columbia and proposals for rehabilitating the species in various provinces.

"At this stage it is too early to say that we have made a breakthrough in controlling the disease," McDonald said. "We are hopeful. Some of the new leads may eventually solve the problem."

Blister-rust is a fungi introduced from Europe through the importation of gooseberry and black current bushes. The shrubs act as hosts to the disease. The spores travel from bush to tree, but not from tree to tree.

It attacks young seedlings and within a few years kills them.

The disease, which came to Canada from France in a shipment of seedlings, had an 11-year head start before it was first noticed in 1921.

At one time, scientists thought antibiotics would work, but that, too, like chemical sprays, proved unsuccessful.

The white pine is bluish-green and occasionally reaches a height of 250 feet and a diameter of eight feet. But such giants are not common. They are more often about 90 to 110 feet tall and two or three feet in diameter.

The wood is light, soft, fine grained and non-porous. It is excellent for cabinet-making.

Native Victorian Turns 102

Victoria's oldest native daughter, Mrs. Roberta Robertson, marked her 102nd birthday on Tuesday.

The event was celebrated with a quiet party at Pemberton Road Private Hospital, attended by the few remaining family members and staff.

There was champagne, however, assorted treats, tea and a birthday cake. Also, the cigarettes Mrs. Robertson still enjoys.

She was born Oct. 3, 1870, and is a daughter of the late Lieut-Col. Richard Wolfenden, who came to Victoria from England in 1858. After soldiering he became a civic worker and for years was the King's and Queen's Printer.

Mrs. Robertson was first married in April 1900 to Charles Bishop Innes. They had four daughters.

He died in 1924. In 1937 she married Duncan Robertson, who died three years later.

As a child in James Bay, Mrs. Robertson was a playmate of Victoria's famous artist, Emily Carr.

FIRST BURSARY WINNER NAMED

Bruce Kirker, 18, today was named first recipient of a bursary established by the Victoria Foundation.

Foundation director E. E. Chamberlin said Kirker improved his academic standing from a Grade 9 to a Grade 11 level in a Boys' Club learning project.

The bursary winner will be given aid meeting day-to-day expenses during a college preparation course in which he is enrolled at Camosun College.

Pig War Ceremony Planned

Esquimalt-based armed forces personnel will join British and American troops Saturday, Oct. 21, for ceremonies in the San Juan Islands marking the 100th anniversary of the ending of the Pig War.

The ceremonies will take place at the old British garrison site, in Garrison Bay on San Juan.

It will mark the signing of the treaty on Oct. 21, 1872, by Kaiser Wilhelm.

About 90 members of the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry will take part, as well as a gun team from the reserve naval division, HMCS Malahat.

Two Canadian minesweepers will be present and two naval auxiliary vessels to ferry the troops from the anchored ships to shore.

A contingent of British troops now under training at Suffield, Alta., will be flown in to represent the British.

Camosun Elects Council Head

Following a vote taken among the college's 1,450 Lansdowne campus students, Gregor Myers was named vice-president; Valerie Denford, secretary-treasurer; and Susan Cluff and David Young, members-at-large.

Integrity at Time of Need

Suddenly Sicily Has Its Own Immigrant Woes

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — For years Sicilians have been emigrating by the thousands to work in mainland Italy or abroad. Now they have their own immigration problem, posed by an influx of people from Africa.

The immigrants are nearly all from such countries as Morocco and Tunisia. Some have light skins, others are black. They are referred to collectively as "the Africans" or "the Tunisians."

SHOW PREJUDICE

There have been complaints that Sicilians are maltreating the Africans, much as Italian workers complain that they are mistreated in Switzerland or Germany, for example.

In some cafes at Mazara del Vallo, a fishing port, the Africans get coffee and drinks in paper cups "to avoid contagion." People there claim "the Tunisians" carry germs.

There are some 1,000 North Africans in Mazara and 4,000 others in the nearby area of Trapani, in the southwest tip of Sicily. They number many hundreds in Palermo.

Often they live four or five in a single room, with each paying about $17 a month.

At Castelvetrano, an agricultural town inland, they have been settled in the half-ruined houses that still stand after a disastrous quake in 1968.

The Africans provide cheap labor as fishermen, farm hands and construction workers. They work for $5 to $6 a day, with the employers saving even more by paying no contribution to medical and pension funds run by the state.

HIRED BY DAY

At Castelvetrano and nearby Campobello they idle around in the main piazza early in the morning in what Italians call a "hands market." Farmers come and offer jobs for the day at whatever pay they think is necessary.

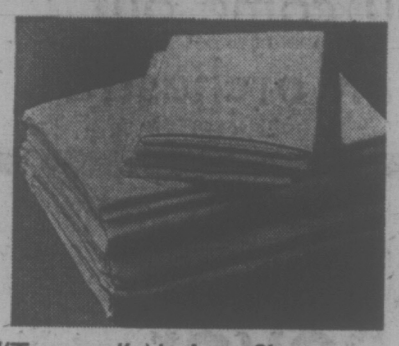

Sicilian farm workers staged several demonstrations a few months ago and asked authorities to do something to stop the outsiders from taking jobs.

Hundreds have moved over to the Italian peninsula. A common sight on Italian beaches this summer is dozens of Africans in the scorching sun peddling carpets or blankets to sunbathers. They are hired by Italian merchants.

Consumer Group Eyes Children's Ads

The Victoria branch of the Canadian Association of Consumers has just completed the first part of a national survey on the implications of television advertising to children.

The year-long survey will gather information and spot infractions of the recently passed Broadcast Code for Advertising to Children. Results of the local survey will then go to CAC headquarters in Ottawa for processing.

The Broadcast Code for Advertising to Children covers commercials aimed specifically at children 12 years of age and under.

According to the code, commercials should not "reflect disdain for parents." Neither should they pressure children or their parents to purchase or exaggerate, through the advertising media, service, product or premium characteristics such as size and performance.

During the first week-long survey, Sept. 18 to 24, teams of monitors across Canada watched their local stations for one hour daily at children's peak viewing times.

Rosemary Gray, head of the Victoria survey team, says monitors were asked to report on commercials with one or more objectionable features.

Objectionable features, according to the CAC, include commercials that imply possession of a particular product will make the owner superior or that without it the child will be open to ridicule and contempt.

The group also watched for advertisements reflecting a derogatory attitude towards parents and parental judgment.

Monitors also listed types of products advertised during children's viewing times. Hours selected for the survey are: weekdays, 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 4 to 8 p.m.; Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 5 p.m. to 6 p.m.; Sundays 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Mrs. Gray says her team of 11 monitors "all strongly objected to advertisements for feminine deodorant sprays shown during children's viewing time."

Mrs. Gray Says what "shook" most monitors was the number of commercials shown during the hour-long session.

"There will be four or five advertisements during one commercial break," she said. "They are shot on the screen so quickly you hardly have time to see them."

"If industry isn't conforming to the code the CAC will ask for stronger legislation," Mrs. Gray said.

Three more week-long surveys will be held in December, 1972, March and June, 1973. CAC national headquarters is expected to issue a report on child oriented advertising by the fall of 1973.

Candy Claims Banned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outfielder Lou Brock of St. Louis Cardinals won't be telling children over television anymore that he gets his base stealing speed by eating the candy, Holloway Milk Duds.

Beatrice Foods Co. of Chicago has been prohibited from using deceptive endorsements by athletes and athletic organizations for any of its bakery or confectionery products under terms of a consent order provisionally accepted by the Federal Trade Commission, it was announced recently.

The FTC's complaint alleges that Beatrice's advertising creates the false impression that eating candies such as Holloway Milk Duds is necessary to instill, improve and maintain athletic ability and performance.

Visiting Olympic Hostess Tells of Munich Horror

The horror that swept Germany when the Israeli Olympic athletes were slain at Munich clamped an iron grip on Kiel, where the Olympic sailing competitions were held.

"The tragedy at Munich," she says, "for a while made us feel we were at the end of the world. There were big discussions and the officials went to Munich to decide what should happen."

The decision to continue was inevitable, she says. "We had to go on or it would be too easy for terrorists to do it again."

But the bloom was wiped off the Olympic rose.

"The Israeli sailing team went home," she says," and the Israeli hostess that stayed behind couldn't go anywhere without being guarded."

The gloom lasted until the final moments:

"Even at the final medal ceremonies everyone kept looking around in case anything should happen."

Another result of the kilings was a change in attitude toward the German police.

"Before the tragedy, people were remembering the last German Olympics when Hitler was in power. They said there were much too many police and guns — just like a police state," said Miss Wegner. But after the tragedy occurred, people were asking why there weren't more police and more guns.

Miss Wegner is a languages student at the University of Heidelberg and the thesis she is writing will have a Canadian flavor to it — the Canadian team's chef, William Cox of Toronto, helped her with it.

But it wasn't Cox's influence or a European's eye-view of Canada that made Miss Wegner decide to visit this country.

She's here is because of the glowing accounts of Canada she got from Kit McDonnell, daughter of John Lort, the Greater Victoria Public Library's former chief librarian.

Mrs. McDonnell and Miss Wegner became fast friends when they were studying languages at the University of Helsinki.

What is the Cnadian image in Germany?

Practically non-existent, says Miss Wegner.

"We think negative things about the United States and Canada. When we talk about North America we mean the U.S. We think of it as being dirty and full of problems," Miss Wegner says.

"You don't think too much about Canada — it's out of the way, if you know what I mean."

This attitude prevails even against the Canadian troops stationed in Germany:

"Here again, it's the U.S. first and Canada behind, not very much talked about."

What, then, do Germans associate with Canada?

Miss Wegner says it's "hockey and Pierre Trudeau."

She amends this a little:

"This, of course, was when Pierre Trudeau wasn't married yet. We knew that he was there."

On returning to her homeland, she's hoping to fill in some of the information gaps as a volunteer ambassador-at-large.

WENDY DEY — EDITOR

RICH GIRL SERVED, POOR GIRL WAITS . . .

FREDERICTON (CP) — Rich girl, poor girl; which one gets the best service when she goes shopping?

Susan wore cheap, babby slacks, and oversized shirt, and carried a vulgar, showy purse for her "poor girl" role.

Connie wore a stylish new dress with matching white shoes and purse; her hair had been done and she was carefully made up.

The pair visited 29 local stores divided into four categories: shoe, jewelry, clothing, and other.

The result?

"I'd hate to be poor," said Susan.

"I felt really rejected at times. I didn't think people were that bad."

On their shopping excursion, the girls entered stores at the same time and stood close to each other while they handled articles to draw attention.

They then measured the length of time it took for each to be served, noted how they were addressed and the assistance each received.

Over-all, "rich" Connie received service first in 85 per cent of stores visited.

SWAG Sponsors Talks

The Status of Women Action Group (SWAG) is sponsoring a series of five noon-hour information sessions for women at the YM-YWCA, 880 Courtney St., starting Thursday, Oct. 12.

The discussions, to be held every Thursday at noon for five weeks, are aimed at working women in the downtown area and are free.

First speaker, Dr. Barbara Baxter, will talk about contraception, sex and women. The following week Canada Manpower counsellor Doris Bedard will talk about retraining, upgrading and part-time employment.

On Oct. 26, SWAG president Kathleen Ruff will talk about the effects of equal rights and better status for women. The following week Chris Waddell of the labor department women's division will talk about legislation protecting women from job discrimination.

U.K. Alcoholic Total Nears 500,000 Mark

LONDON (CP)—Alcohol has become the most widely-used drug in England and Wales with the number of confirmed addicts nearing 500,000, authorities here have announced.

At the same time, the age of alcoholics is dropping, say officials of the National Association for Mental Health.

In 1962, the average age of alcoholics was 45 but a recent survey had shown that 43 per cent now were under 40 and 13 per cent were under 30. Eighteen per cent were aged 41 to 45. In addition to confirmed alcoholics, the association found, there are about 500,000 "heavy drinkers" in England and Wales.

A recent article in the weekly publication New Scientist estimated that in Scotland the incidence of alcoholism may be up to seven times greater than in England.

After 28 Years in the Jungle, It's Love at First Sight

TOKYO (UPI) — She says it was love at first sight. He says she is the right person to look after him.

The couple, former Imperial Japanese army Sgt. Shoichi Yokoi, 57, and Mihoko Hatashin, 44, will be married some time this month and fly next year to Guam, the U.S. Pacific island where Yokoi spent 28 years hiding in the jungles after the Second World War.

Yokoi returned to Japan last February and began looking for a suitable spouse who could help him resettle in a society that has changed drastically since the days before the war.

Miss Hatashin, who lives in the ancient Japanese cultural city of Kyoto, met Yokoi for the first time in August through a friend.

"It was love at first sight." she told a news conference held shortly after their engagement was announced last week.

Yokoi at first didn't know for sure whether she came to see him in earnest.

The former soldier had left Japan during his youth when women were subservient and the emperor was revered.

Now no one worshipped Emperor Hirohito, he said shortly after his return. He also said he didn't like women talking back to men.

Today, Yokoi seems to understand that the emperor is a mere figurehead and that men and women are equal under the post-war constitution.

But he nevertheless appears still to like an obedient women and Miss Hatashin is such a person.

"When I first met him," she said, "He did all the talking. He talked about his life in the jungles and food. It was then that I decided that I could marry him."

They met again a week after their first meeting and saw each other a third time before Yokoi entered the national hospital in Tokyo for a medial checkup in September.

Since then they have been corresponding.

"(In letters) we now talk about having a quiet life," Miss Hatashin said. "He wants children and I want at least one."

Yokoi said Miss Hatashin is "the right person to protect me. We are not too far in age. She was born before the war and we have much common."

He said he cannot find anything in common with women born after the war.

Yokoi, who wears glasses to correct the weakened vision acquired in Guam's jungles, said he is confident of making a living as a tailor.

Friends said he was a good tailor before the war and he proved his skill when he surrendered to Guam authorities wearing clothing he made from jungle leaves.

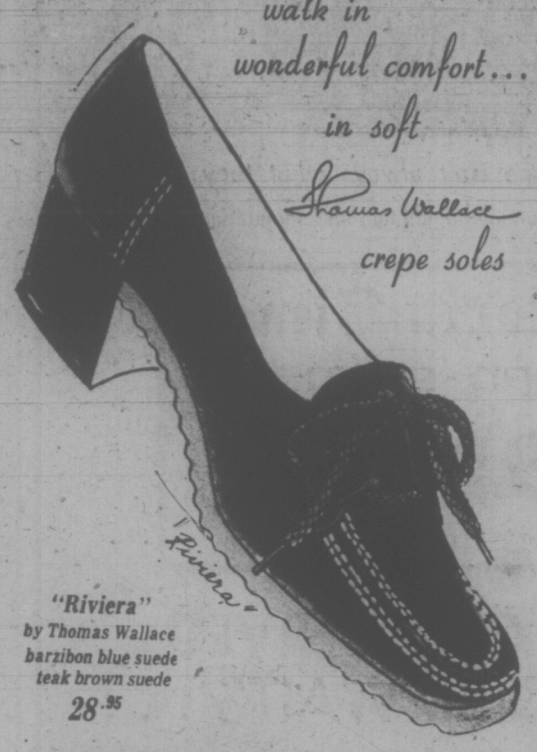

"I owed a lot (to people in Guam) so I am planning to go to Guam to extend my greetings (to them) sometime next year," Yokoi said.

"That'll be our honeymoon."

Yokoi will follow an old Japanese custom of exchanging betrothal gifts with his b r i d e - t o - b e next week. Friends said the wedding may take place sometime this month.

Watching Eyes Worry This Nervous Shopper

DEAR ABBY: I wonder if any of your readers are bothered by the same thing that bothers me. When shopping I will often look up and see someone watching me! I realize that with all the shoplifting going on, they have to watch people, but you would think they would have trained personnel who could do this subtly so as not to make the customers feel they are being spied on.

A friend of mine who works in a supermarket told me that he was told to keep his eye on me! (I have already talked to my lawyer about this.)

If I am suspicious looking it must be from a complex I have. I am shy by nature and do not like to look people squarely in the face. I can't help it. It hurts to think I am not trusted because I would never steal anything.

Thanks for letting me get this off my chest.—Innocent But Looks Guilty

Will Committee Meet on Women?

elizabeth forbes

First reports published on the decision to hold a session of the provincial legislature this October also intimated that during the session, Premier Dave Barrett might name standing committees.

This, it was suggested, would allow members appointed to such committees to do necessary homework before the 1973 session of the legislature convened in early January.

Immediately I read the w o r d "committees" my thoughts went back to a day during the last session of the legislature . . . February 10, 1972, to be exact.

That day, Eileen Dailly, then an outspoken member of the Opposition, presented a notice of motion.

I have that notice before me as I write. It reads:

"On Monday next, Mrs. Dailly to move— That a special committee be appointed to study the Royal Commission Report on the Status of Women with respect to its recommendations so far as they fall within the jurisdiction of the provincial government and to report to the House the preferences and proposals, if any, approved by the special committee with respect to such recommendations, and that the special committee appointed on January 20 under standing order 68 be instructed to propose members for such committee, reporting to the House with all convenient speed its recommendations."

To my knowledge, no action was taken on Mrs. Dailly's motion. A special committee was not named to study recommendations in the royal commission report that concerned the province.

This leads me to the question — will Mrs. Dailly, as the new minister of education, get the special committee now that she asked for back in February? Or does she still believe such a committee is needed?

Last November, at a seminar arranged at University of Victoria to discuss the status of women report, Rosemary Brown, new M.L.A. for Vancouver-Burrard, spoke of certain recommendations that needed urgent attention of the provincial government.

These included six dealing with education which she said must be implemented if we are ever to break to cycle of the role of women always being a secondary one.

Of 36 other recommendations, Mrs. Brown singled out two dealing with the Minimum Wage Act which would cover household workers and berry pickers.

Another dealt with amendments to the laws necessary to ensure that the concept of equal partnership in marriage become a reality. Two others had to do with day care centres and one recommended more women on boards, commissions and task forces.

Of course, British Columbia did have some of the commission's recommendations in effect before the report came out.

Our Minimum Wage Act covered persons of both sexes; the Fair Employment Practices Act included sex (male or female) as a prohibited ground for discrimination in hiring.

There were Family Courts in certain a r e a s of the province. Provision for a sliding scale of fees, based on the means of the parents, had been instituted for children in day care. And in the Department of Labor there had been established a Women's Bureau to deal with complaints of women in the field of employment.

However, this does not alter the fact that amendments are needed in some of those acts, nor that changes are not overdue in the Women's Bureau if it is to really fulfil the functions for which it was named.

It's certain the women of British Columbia will watch both the October and January sessions of the Legislature with added interest and the hope that much will be accomplished in their favor.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Thursday, Oct. 5,

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Pace is slow unless you are careless. Getting somewhere in a hurry may not be worth the consequence .You will understand. Older person wants to aid, but you may resent interference. Key is to measure and time moves.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): What appears to be a smooth path may have thorns. Know it and prepare accordingly. Take nothing for granted — and this includes emotions. Member of opposite sex has some misgivings. You learn, grow.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You get proverbial second chance. Those who had held you back have a falling out among themselves. You are beneficiary. Leo is likely to be involved. Independent course now is advisable. Act accordingly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be cautious in taking stand. Those who are enthusiastic now may act in different manner tomorrow. Know it and don't get caught in middle. Aquarian plays key role. You are not being told complete story.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Some hopes, desires are subject to revision. Don't be afraid to change your mind. Sagittarian could play prominent role. Money situation is spotlighted. You gain through versatility. Best to diversify.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't ask for more than you can handle. Check apparent minor matters. Be thorough. Task that appears easy could contain deceptive angle. Be wary. Leo and Aquarius individuals are in picture. Look beneath surface.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be ready for quick change of plans. Gemini and Virgo figure prominently. Your destination is blocked. Seek alternatives. Tread lightly. Be subtle. Someone will tell you what you need to know. Be receptive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent is on intelligent compromise. Don't force issues. Obtain hint from Libra message. Member of opposite sex is involved. Friend who usually is carefree now confides problem. Don't cast first stone.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may feel that "nothing is happening." In reality, much is occurring and much of what is happening is behind the scenes. Pisces is in picture. Improve timing. One at top is making room for you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Practical issues dominate. You can now dig deep and come up with constructive solutions. Avoid unnecessary delays, postponements. Applies specifically to medical appointments, basic chores.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 Feb. 18): You can appeal to more persons. Your concepts will be appreciated. Personal magnetism is featured. Make contact with one familiar with distribution. Make product available. Accent progress.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): New attitude must be made to exist at home base. You have right to live your own life. Be sure others understand. Leo individual could aid. Speak up, express views. Don't equivocate. Review property value.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, possess unusual ability to express yourself. Recent disappointment served as challenge to your maturity. You now are in process of taking on more responsibility. If single, marriage is on horizon.

PECANS FOR SWEET TOOTH

By MARY MOORE

Some of our young cooks with husbands with a sweet tooth may never have made a southern pecan pie.

It is easy to make and would be an exciting change from pumpkin pie for dessert for Thanksgiving.

SOUTHERN PECAN PIE

Pastry:

One and One-quarter c. sifted cake and pastry flour.
One half tsp. salt.
One-third c. shortening.
Two and one-half tbsp. butter.
Two tbsp. ice cold water.

Filling:

One and one-quarter c. pecan halves.
Three large eggs.
One and one-half tbsp. melted butter.
One c. light corn syrup.
One-half to 1 tsp. pure vanilla.
One c. granulated sugar.
One tbsp. flour.
One-eighth tsp. salt.

To make pastry cut shortening and butter into flour and salt with pastry blender until size of small peas. Drizzle in water, tossing with a fork, until you can press the dough into a ball between your palms. Roll out on floured board to fit deep 9" pie plate. Shape a high double fluted edge.

In the bottom of the unbaked pie shell arrange all of the pecans to cover it. Beat the eggs until foamy and add all remaining filling ingredients and mix well. Slowly pour over pecans and let stand five minutes. Then pecans will have risen to top.

Bake at 350 deg. F. for 45 minutes. Outer edges of filling will be set and centre slightly soft, but centre will set after pie is removed from oven. Serve cut into eight wedges with unsweetened whipped cream, if desired.

Pecan pie makes exciting Thanksgiving change

Soccer Women Get the Boot

MOSCOW (AP) — Women soccer players of the world, disband.

That was the word from the Soviet ministry of health when it fielded a complaint from an irate male sports fan who said he was disgusted by the sight of two women's teams playing last summer.

Valery Velichko said it was unpleasant to see the girls running with things like pigtails dangling.

Velichko said he was sure soccer playing would render the women "incapable of motherhood." An additional hazard for him was that it could "wreck romance and marriage."

He didn't say whether Mrs. Velichko was playing ball.

The ministry monthly, Health, in its October edition, said Velichko was right.

Dr. Natalya Grayevskaya, chief doctor for the Soviet Sports Federation, said soccer could give women varicose veins. Worse, she said, all that scrambling around for the ball can "damage the functions of the sexual organs."

Another danger was the chest trap.

"One of the elements of stopping a ball in soccer is to stop it with the breast," the doctor said.

"A ball striking the breasts is unhealthy," she judged.

TEXTILE PLEA MADE

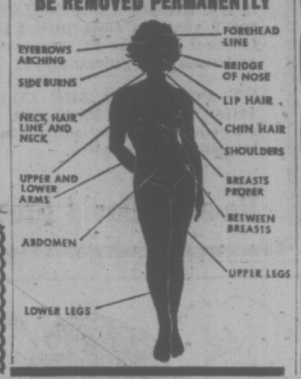

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has asked the textile and clothing board to review restrictions that have been in effect on the importation of double-knit and warp-knit fabrics, the trade department said Tuesday.

The board recommended last spring that imports from Japan, Korea, Hong Kong and Taiwan be temporarily restricted to levels not more than 7.5 per cent above 1971 imports.

If your doctor has recommended that you reduce saturated fats in your diet, you will want to know how to prepare your favourite dishes with corn oil.

The booklet also tells you that when a conventional recipe calls for melted shortening, butter or margarine, you can substitute these by an equal quantity of corn oil. However, if a recipe stipulates the use of solid fats, use only ¾ the amount of oil. For instance, if your recipe says ½ cup (8 tablespoons) of butter, use 6 tablespoons of oil instead.

If you have used corn oil for frying, cool it and then strain it through cheese cloth, then store it in a tightly closed container in the refrigerator.

The Argentine Messiah

By ROBERT D. OHMAN

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Seventeen years ago angry army commanders led their garrisons in rebellion and, after three uncertain days, they ended nine years of dictatorial rule by Juan D. Peron.

The victorious generals declared their revolution would create "a new Argentina," untouched by Peron or Peronism, but they failed. He remains in exile, but is still the strongest single figure in Argentine politics, with messianic influence over millions of followers.

He is 76 years old and 6,000 miles away, yet his decisions may determine if elections planned by the military government will be successful and representative.

This was recognized by the current military president, Gen. Alejandro Lanusse, after six coups and 17 years of drift had left the country virtually bankrupt. He called for elections next March 25 and appealed for Peron and the Peronists to participate, despite embittered objections by some of his army colleagues.

It remains to be seen if elections will be held and if Peron will return to lead his followers, but the antagonists are marshalling their forces.

MARK UPRISING

Terrorist bombs set by pro-Peronist guerrillas exploded throughout the country to show rejection of the army "revolution" that began on a rainy Sept. 16, 1955. Anti-Peronists placed wreaths and attended ceremonies honoring the hundreds of persons who perished in the fighting.

The rebellion was sparked in Cordoba by Gen. Eduardo Lonardi, whose troops seized that industrial city after stiff street fighting with soldiers and union men loyal to Peron.

Other generals hesitated and it appeared the revolt would be put down. Then the Mendoza garrison joined the rebels. Other commands followed, and on Sept. 19 Peron was out.

He sought asylum in the Paraguayan embassy, resigned, and was escorted to a Paraguayan gunboat undergoing repairs here.

The ex-president was declared a traitor and stripped of his general's rank. Charges of rape were filed against him for living with a 14-year-old girl in the presidential residence. He was accused of looting the treasury for personal gain and of sending millions of dollars abroad.

MAY STILL RETURN

From exile in Paraguay, Venezuela, Panama, the Dominican Republic and finally Spain, Peron remained undisputed chief of the Peronist movement, balancing factions against each other and never permitting a challenger to emerge.

His manipulations, through couriers running back and forth to get instructions, kept Argentina so agitated that government after government fell.

Lanusse, who seized power last year, legalized political parties, called for elections and even began rehabilitating Peron, a task unimaginable months earlier.

USSR Crop Crisis Blamed On Weather . . . and Trains

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The vital grain harvest of northern Kazakhstan is facing serious problems because much of it is damp and there are not enough railway cars to move it to drying facilities, Pravda complained today.

Kazakhstan normally provides one-fifth of the total wheat harvest and this year's crop there is especially important because of dry weather which stunted the grain of European Russia and the Ukraine.

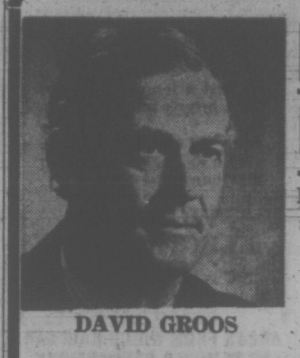

Foreign analysts say the virgin lands crop is good and perhaps excellent but needs to be brought in quickly because of heavy rains at harvest time.

Pravda complained Tuesday, suggested to observers that unless something is done quickly some of the grain may rot before it can be dried.

The Communist party newspaper said the southern Urals railway system had only provided half the cars requested in the north Kazakhstan region, and in the Kokchetav region only 60 per cent of the September plan for grain transportation was fulfilled.

It cited as another example the Tselinograd grain elevator, where drying equipment was working non-stop but the piles of grain still keep growing. Only by moving it away by train could it be dried fast enough.

The poor harvest has caused Russia to buy large quantities of wheat this year.

EVERYONE IS TALKING, WHO'S ACTING

Environmental control is something everyone is talking about but who is doing anything?

THE REAL THREAT TO VANCOUVER ISLAND AND PARTICULARLY TO VICTORIA IS THE PROPOSED ALASKA-BELLINGHAM SUPER-TANKER ROUTE. My opponents and I, in fact I think all Victorians, are concerned that one major marine collision near here could ruin our beaches and damage our marine life for untild years to come.

MY CAREER AS A SAILOR GAVE ME YEARS OF EXPERIENCE IN PRACTICAL MARINE NAVIGATION. During my 9 years in Government meeting and talking to experts, both here and abroad, I have developed a plan for navigational controls in our coastal waters which in my opinion will provide the best possible safeguards against marine collisions and groundings.

MY PROPOSALS ARE CONTAINED IN 3 BILLS, AND A MOTION I TABLED IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS THIS MAY. Had Parliament not been dissolved, I am sure they would be before a committee of the House right now. I am also sure my proposals will have the backing of the Government. With your support for re-election I will be able to complete this work.

Czech Contradictions Looming Ever Larger

By KEVIN DOYLE

PRAGUE (CP) — The state-controlled radio announced the end of Tchaikovsky's rousing Sixth Symphony. The softer strains of a Beethoven sonata were to follow.

The jarring rhythm of Hank Snow's Wabash Cannon Ball rattled off the towering walls and cobblestoned floor of Prague's ancient Old Town Square. No one raised an eyebrow.

The incident, and the reaction of hundreds of Praguers listening in the soft light of a September evening, are insignificant in themselves. But they help illustrate the welter of contradictory elements constituting the character of Communist-governed Czechoslovakia.

In the four years since a lightning invasion by Russian forces doomed progressive attempts at liberalization, these contradictions have, if anything, been intensified.

A kind of passive acceptance of circumstances contrasts with a fiercely active determination to retain old ways and habits against any effort to change them.

'HARD' MONEY WANTED

A sullen, indifferent attitude to foreigners mingles with an avid desire to discuss virtually any subject, with the emphasis on Western politics, in private conversation.

The main cities of Prague, Brno and Bratislava are vastly different in make-up. But they all share the contradictions. Immense art galleries, most of them hung with priceless works collected through the centuries, can often be found in the middle of busy fish markets.

Polite, correct soldiers efficiently direct pedestrian and motor traffic while carrying sub-machine-guns on their backs and heavy pistols on their hips.

In this city of more than a million people, one of the first intriguing surprises awaiting a visitor usually comes shortly after his arrival.

It may happen in an elevator, at a hotel desk, over dinner, in one of the community baths or during a stroll through the streets. But with regularity comes the mumbled phrase, usually in a combination of German, English and Czech: Wanna sell some money?"

On Czechoslovakia's black market, virtually everyone is eager to buy dollars, sterling and marks at up to three times the official rate. The not only of providing an unfor-Czechoslovak currency, denominated in crowns, is practically worthless outside the country .

PURGES UNDER WAY

To purchase Western goods or to emigrate to countries in the West, Czechoslovaks need strong, internationally-accepted currencies. They are willing to pay highly and take elaborate precautions to avoid security officials and the harsh penalties imposed on those who are caught.

Most tourists here are from countries in Eastern Europe. For a Westerner, a Czechoslovak holiday has the advantage not only of providing an unforgettable glance at one of the richest cultures in Europe but also a welcome respite from hordes of other North American tourists like himself.

Czechoslovakia was created in 1918 out of the shattered remains of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. It has endured and often flourished through hundreds of years of external domination by the Habsburgs, the Nazis and the Russians.

A gradual liberalization of Czechoslovak life in 1968 under the leadership of Alexander Dubcek was snuffed out by an invasion of Warsaw pact powers led by Russia.

The trials and imprisonment of intellectuals associated with this movement are still in progress. It is not a subject easily discussed with the Czechoslovaks.

BORDERS GUARDED

A violinist, playing gypsy tunes in a crowded, boisterous wine cellar, lowered his voice and described the purges as brutal. We all feel that way here."

The violinist quickly turned to other topics. My brother played at Expo in Montreal for six months. He got very rich. He made $1,000. Imagine, $1,000."

Most flights into Czechoslovakia are routed through Communist East Berlin where transit passengers are herded by armed guards into a cold, cavernous waiting room, locked and unlocked by hard-faced matrons.

The contrast with Prague's casual, generally informal atmosphere is striking. The harsh security measures are not evident again until you drive to Bratislava in the southeast and approach the Austrian border.

The gentle, rolling farmland turns into a level plain. An ugly, 10-foot-high, black wire fence, studded with watch towers, marks the border. Suspicious, uniformed guards patrol the crossing points.

Sentence Cut

CALGARY (CP) — A 20-year sentence for trafficking in heroin was reduced by Alberta Supreme Court to 10 years.

Glen A. Burman, 39, was sentenced last August after he pleaded guilty to five charges of selling the drug to an undercover agent.

In delivering the appeal court's decision, Mr. Justice M. J. Cairns said he had no doubt Burman would return to trafficking upon his release but that was not the concern of the court.

Miller Making Omelets, And Still Breaking Eggs

NEW YORK (AP) — Arthur Miller has written a play he expects some people may dispute. This is nothing new.

The 10th Broadway-bound Miller drama, The Creation of the World and Other Business, concerns Cain's murder of Abel. Miller calls it "a catastrophic comedy."

"I never previously attempted a comedy," he says. "and I had more fun than in a long time."

"The form never occurred to me to try before. May be I wasn't old enough."

Miller marks his 57th birthday Oct. 17, the day a try-out run of the play starts in Washington. Its arrival at New York's Shubert Theatre is set for Nov. 16.

The way he tells it, Creation developed during 1½ years between work on other scripts.

One is "a large, epic conception of the experience of the U.S. in the last 40 years — I haven't licked it yet." He reports nothing about the other except to say: "I have a sneaky feeling it will get finished first — I can't wait to get home from these rehearsals to get at it."

Creation, directed by Harold-Clurman with a cast including Barbara Harris, Hal Holbrook and Bob Dishy, grew out of a few biblical sketches.

"I've been fascinated with Genesis since childhood," Miller says.

"It just became part of my mind, I guess.

"I hope what it does is set out contemporary dilemmas against a background of the nature of human beings in general. The use of language in it is one of my happiest ventures I think."

There's good reason, Miller feels, why the story of the first murder is the first one in the Bible.

"The people who put it together, I think, quite rightly decided the whole book would be made to hold together as the whole justification for religion, any religion, by the simple fact that man is capable of murdering his brother, and if he weren't he wouldn't need God.

"So my play is an attempt at probing why the chaotic and anarchic animal that we are continuously attempts to create this moral order," the playwright says.

And What Else Do You Want To Know, Kid?

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

Ancient Chinese emperors had a regal way of dismissing bad news. When they chose not to hear it, they simply put golden plugs in their ears.

Different kinds of fireflies tell each other apart by the timing of their flashes of light. If a strange firefly is off your beam—he's no cousin.

You'd never guess what started the great U.S. cold-rolled strip steel industry. Well, tradition says that around 1859 a new ladies' fashion for hoop skirts gave birth to it by creating a demand for flat wire.

One of the reasons wolves have survived is that their ears are so acute they can hear a man walking across a field a quarter of a mile away. The National Geographic Society says Eskimos claim that a wolf "can hear a cloud pass overhead."

What is the healthiest period of life? Well, in most fields of sports men's strength seems to reach a peak in the early 20s, but the body is best able to fight off infectious diseases of all kinds between the ages of five and 15.

Some ice cube: The amount of ice in the Antarctic ice cap is so huge it almost defies the human imagination. If melted at a steady rate, it would supply enough water to keep all the rivers of the world full for 750 years.

Tired bugs: For years scientists thought that ants posted military sentinels to guard their nests and the territories they foraged in. These insects sometimes maintain a motionless posture for hours. The latest word from the bug scholars, however, is that these ants aren't on military guard at all. They are simply suffering from a vice more human than antlike—laziness.

Puffed-up kernels: The popularity of popped corn didn't begin with the movies. This native delicacy was enjoyed by Indians from South America to Canada before the white man came. The product has been so improved by cross-breeding that 98 out of 100 kernels now pop, and an ounce of kernels makes a quart of popped corn.

Folklore: It is lucky to be the seventh son of a seventh son. Even numbers are generally regarded as unluckier than odd numbers. If you see a pin on the floor, you'll have good luck if you pick it up, bad luck if you don't.

Canada Gets U.S. Rejects

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. has disclosed that 1972 model cars left on the Norwood, Ohio, assembly plant lines during a record-long strike will be exported for sale in Canada.

A Chevrolet spokesman said Monday the cars will not meet the U.S. safety and emission-control standards, which were required for ll cars built after Sept. 1.

Tentative plans have scheduled the 3,900 assembly plant workers to report on Oct. 15 to build the 1,113 Chevrolet Camaros and Novas and Pontiac Firebirds. These passenger cars were in various phases of completion when the strike began last April 7.

Work on 1973 model Camaros and Firebirds was expected to begin on Oct. 23, more than a month after their scheduled dealership introduction. Assembly of Novas was removed from the suburban Cincinnati facility.

Members of UAW local 674 ratified the strike settlement last week.

During the 174-day walkout GM officials petitioned the Environmental Protection Agency and the National Highway Traffic Safety Amnistration for a 60-day extension of the 1972 model year pollution standards at the plant.

The federal agencies refused the request.

GM also planned to build 38,508 1972 model cars, in addition to the partially-built autos, but the strike forced them to cancel out.

Human Evolution Stopped, Genetics Expert Claims

DAVIS, Calif. (AP)—Man of the future is often pictured in science fiction as having a large domed head and short arms, but an expert on evolution says man in 25,000 years probably will look pretty much as he does today.

Dr. G. Ledyard Stebbens, founder of the genetics department at the University of California at Davis, says man will continue to develop, changing his society and culture and even the workings of his mind—but not his basic physical appearance.

"You could take a Cro-Magnon man and clean him up and dress him in modern clothing and parade him down Madison Avenue," Stebbens said, "and he would not attract special notice.

"The same probably would be true if you could transport a modern man 25,000 years into the future. Changes that affect our outward appearance would not be very great."

The reason, he said, is that man has largely short-circuited his physical evolution through the development of tools and technology. He has no need to evolve new forms or new physical capabilities because he can invent machines to extend the natural limits on his capabilities.

Man survives not by changing physically, Stebbens said, but by changing his environment and by developing new techniques to deal with his environment.

War on a Human Scale

PHONG DIEN, Vietnam (AP) — A year ago, Tran Tan converted his 10-year old thatch hut into a sturdy wood and tin house for his wife and eight children. Now he squats on the bare concrete floor that remains and ties new thatch onto a bomboo frame.

Tan, a 45-year-old rice farmer in this district town 15 miles north of Hue, is back where he started.

"Three-and-a-half months ago, the government soldiers came and said the Viet Cong are coming," Tan said. "We went with the soldiers and were put in a refugee camp near Hue. Ten days ago I came back, and my house was gone."

Tan left before he could harvest his rice crop and missed planting time. He hasn't enough money to rent the paddy he farmed before and says he will have to work for neighbors until he can get another field.

"Two of my children earned 10,000 piasters $25 last year," Tan said. "I had to take it to buy bamboo poles and thatch to bufld a new house. Now I have nothing. I had two sons in school last year, but I can't afford to send them back."

REFUGEES RETURN

Tan was among the first to return to the ruins of Phong Dien and begin to rebuild. A few more trickle in, and nearly all find ashes, charcoal and twisted tin where their houses once stood. Even the trees are gone. Animals that weren't blown to pieces ran away or were eaten by government troops.

When the North Vietnamese swept across Quang Tri just north of here nearly four ese marines fell back and hid months ago, South Vietnamin a command post in Phong Dien. It didn't take long for enemy artillerymen to find them.

"It began at 8 o'clock in the morning," recalled Nguyen Thi Mien, who had stayed behind to harvest her tobacco crop for fear that she would starve in a refugee camp. She hid in the family bunker with her five children as shells crashed around them.

"About 10, a shell blew up some gasoline, and everything started to burn. We ran to the district headquarters and hid there. When the shelling stopped at three, about 400 houses were gone.

Thousands Held In Bangladesh

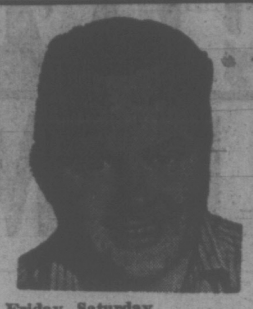

DACCA, Bangaldesh (AP) — Home Minister Abdul Mannan disclosed today that 41,000 persons had been arrested in Bangladesh for allegedly co-operating with Pakistani forces during the civil war.

He added that the search for other "collaborators" continues.

So far, he said, 1,000 of those arrested had been brought before the courts and some had received the death penalty for crimes that included murder, arson, rape and looting.

Mannan said another 5,000 had been charged and would appear before special tribunals within the next few weeks.

First Left Turn

REGINA (CP) — Mixed reaction followed word Tuesday that the provincial government intends to install a cable television distribution system through facilities of Sask Tel, the provincially-owned communications utility.

Opposition Leader D. G. Steuart said the plan represents the NDP government's first venture into socialism since it was elected 14 months ago.

"And it is interesting to note that it is in the field of communication which is a very close cousin to the field of propaganda," he said.

"This party in the past has shown a great bent towards propaganda and it would be a very simple step for them to start a channel of their own under the guise of educational television."

Private cable television companies no longer would be able to operate in the province and existing ones in Estevan and Weyburn would be absorbed into the new system after negotiations between them and the government.

Grain Grades Dip

REGINA (CP) — Foul autumn weather has reduced grain grades considerably, the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool reported Tuesday.

The Pool said in its weekly crop report that farmers also expect a loss of bushels because of lower bushel weights. The full effects of rain, snow and frost on rades would not be known until the crop was harvested.

Farmer Aid Program

WINNIPEG (CP) — A federal-provincial program aimed at helping lower and middle-income famers earn more through diversification was announced Tuesday by Manitoba Agriculture Minister Sam Uskiw.

Under the program which is to begin this month, grants of up to $2,000 will be provided to farmers to help cover capital expenditures for livestock.

'Practical' Protest

PINCHER CREEK, Alta. (CP) — Catching samples of gas-plant air pollution in plastic arbage bags for delivery to the government is the only practical way for residents of the Foothills area to monitor pollution levels, a research council of Alberta consultant, said.

Dr. R. F. Klemm told a public hearing, held by the environment conservation authority into emissions from sulphur extraction gas plants, that the industry should be required to submit monthly reports to a government regulatory agency.

Methadone Deaths

EDMONTON (CP)—Methadone overdoses have caused almost one-third of drug-related deaths in Alberta this year, statistics released by the provincial coroner show.

"It's nothing to get excited about," provincial coroner Dr. Max Cantor said in an interview.

Frontier College Still Thriving

TORONTO (CP) — Mark Stiles works out of an office now as program co-ordinator for Frontier College but he is looking forward to getting out as a field worker once again.

A 24-year-old university graduate, he would still be working in a British Columbia copper mine if a labor dispute hadn't closed the mine.

He made $2.66 an hour for his eight-hour shift but his main job started at night after his shift in the mine ended.

He was a volunteer teacher for Frontier College, a non-profit organization founded 73 years ago to bring educational and social resources to adults in isolated communities.

Every year the college sends about 100 laborer-teachers to take jobs in mining towns, lumber camps, fishing villages or other remote settlements.

Coca Cola Hits Polish Spot

WARSAW (AP) — With the blessing of Communist officialdom, Coca-Cola has hit the Polish market as a completely "rehabilitated" beverage.

No longer is it a symbol of dollar imperialism but rather, as one Polish state paper put it, "the fruit of peaceful coexistence."

It first became available about two months ago. Sales reports show Poles have taken to it in a big way. Warsaw's largest store, Supersam, sells 15,000 bottles daily.

State shopkeepers, long accustomed to serving soft drinks lukewarm in the hottest weather, are being urged by authorities to serve Coke chilled. The result has been a bigger supply of refrigerators to state-run bars.

An unprecedented advertising campaign to promote the drink is in full swing in the Communist controlled press.

A blonde model holds up a bottle with captions reading: "It's already in Warsaw — try it and you'll understand why it's being drunk in the world over 150 million times daily."

A Warsaw factory is producing the drink under licence. A second plant will start production next year in Silesia province.

"It's people like me who really know how to practise coexistence," said one Warsavian.

LEGISLATURE SHUT MONDAY

The Legislative Buildings will be closed Monday, Oct. 9, for observance of the Thanksgiving Day holiday.

The Provincial Museum will be open from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily over the long-weekend.

Peru Goes Shopping

CALGARY (CP) — A team of Peruvian petroleum specialists arrived in the province this week to consider purchasing Canadian oilfield equipment.

"We need five, 15-ton tracked vehicles right now," said Eduardo Parodi Ostolaza, chief of transportation for the government-owned oil and gas organization, Petro Peru. He indicated other vehicles might be needed as exploration continues in heavily jungled areas.

New-Home Warranties Promised

VANCOUVER (CP) — A national system of new-home warranties to ensure that the home buyer gets what he's paying for was promised Tuesday by Ron Basford, federal minister of state for urban affairs.

In an address at the 29th annual conference of the Canadian Real Estate Association in Hotel Vancouver, Basford said his concern "that the homebuyer gets what he pays for" springs from his experience as consumer and corporate affairs minister.

"It has always seemed a little inconsistent to me that you can get all kinds of warranties and guarantees when you buy a $20 steam iron, or a car," he said.

"But when you by a house — the largest and most complex purchase an individual makes — you are entirely on your own."

Basford said the Canadian homebuilding industry "is probably the finest in the world in terms of quality of workmanship and standard of performance," but added:

"There is always an element of risk that the contractor or subcontractor may go out of business, or is one of the few fringe operators whose standards are below those of the industry.

"In my opinion, that risk should not be placed entirely on the consumer as it is now. And one of my earliest steps will be to complete the work now in progress and institute a national system of new-home warranties."

When asked later to explain how such a system of warranties would work, he said he did not want to spell out the details now.

Basford, who is seeking re-election to the Commons in Vancouver Centre, said all he could say was that his department is "working on one (system) and we will be putting one into effect."

In his speech, Basford repeated expresssions of concern he has voiced in the past over land speculation.

It was because of the high cost of land, he said, that the federal government last June introduced legislation to provide new financial help for municipalities wanting to get into residential landbanking.

"We have to deal more effectively with land speculation," he said. "Perhaps by making it less profitable to engage in speculative activities that artificially inflate the price of land or hinder residential development."

He said most people want to be able to make a profit on any piece of property they sell, but claimed there are "certain areas" where speculative buying and selling of land is not working to the common good.

Basford gave no details on what the government might do to deal with the speculation problem, except to say that efforts would be made.

Basford also told the real estate men of an impending move to change both the structure and function of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

The objective, he said, is to enable the crown corporation to function as a "social policy instrument, rather than solely as a government mortgage agency."

A study started early this year is now complete, he said, and the CMHC board of directors will be in the "next few weeks" making recommendations on major changes in the corporation's structure and function.

CANADA ASKS BIGGER FRASER FISH SHARE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Minister Jack Davis said Tuesday Canada will renegotiate the international Pacific salmon fisheries treaty with a view to increasing Canadian fishermen's share of salmon heading through international waters to the Fraser River.

United States and Canadian fishermen now have a 50-50 split in the fish, but Davis said in an interview the renegotiation — to begin as soon as possible — would aim at cutting the U.S. fishermen's share to possibly 25 per cent.

He said Canada does not want a proposed $7 million U.S. appropriation toward construction of Fraser spawning channels and is prepared to put up the total $14 million cost in order to get more of the Fraser sockeye fishery.

Under the treaty the U.S. put up half the cost of rehabilitating Fraser runs following the Hell's Gate slide in the Fraser Canyon in 1913, and in return shares half the runs which go through Juan de Fuca Strait to the Fraser.

There have been recurring disputes over sharing of the catch and Davis said it is time to re-evaluate the Fraser fishery in relation to other runs in B.C. rivers.

U.S. fishery authorities have been calling for renegotiation of the treat according to dollar value, Davis said.

U. S. fishermen intercept Canadian salmon running to the Nass and Skeena rivers in northwestern B.C., he said, and Canadian officials believe the Americans have had the best part of the bargain.

The minister conceded, however, that Canadian trollers operating off the west coast of Vancouver Island have cut into returns of U.S. salmon stocks.

Continental Integration Proposed

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (CP) — Canada and the United States have no alternative but to integrate their combined resources, the president of the Canadian Lumbermen's Association said today.

Speaking to the National Hardwood Lumber Association, W. W. Gillespie said the two countries should create a North American trading bloc similar to the European Common Market.

He noted that both countries suffer from unemployment, but blamed high Canadian jobless figures on people who don't want to work.

He called for a combined approach by all trade associations to press governments for manpower, saying many sawmills have job openings which people refuse to take.

In expanding his theme of "two countries, one industry," he called for collaboration at all levels of government and the timber industries in both countries to face problems of pollution, inflation and economic stability.

VANCOUVER

When was the last time you had a good look at Vancouver? A while ago, we bet. So perhaps you haven't seen Skana's new pool at Stanley Park. The Planetarium. The new Vancouver . . . with its tall towers downtown. And the old Vancouver – Gastown . . . where it all began. It's beginning again, in an exciting new way. Now is a great time to see Vancouver. TOURIST TILT 'MUSHROOMED'

VANDERHOOF, B.C. (CP) — RCMP said Tuesday a fight between a group of Canadians and American tourists in this town 60 miles west of Prince George was "simply an argument between two men that just mushroomed."

An RCMP spokesman said two men began arguing "local affairs" in a cabaret Saturday morning. One of the men was a Canadian and one an American.

The area has been a popular spot with Americans in the past few years with large numbers purchasing summer cottages in the district.

RCMP said the two men begun scuffling and others joined in "but had no idea what they were fighting about."

"Both men just happened to have a number of friends in the club," the police spokesman said.

Dikes 'Insufficient'

SURREY (CP) — Federal Agriculture Minister Bud Olson said Monday the agreement between various levels of government to improve dikes in the Fraser Valley should be re-examined. After meeting with Surrey farmers and touring the Serpentine-Nicomeki Valley area of Surrey, Olson said more pumping facilities were needed in addition to the dikes to direct water off farmland.

Ex-Prom Queen Comes to Screen

NEW YORK (NYT) — Eleanor Perry is delighted to report that she has a date for the prom. Starting next summer, she will co-produce with Sidney Glazier the film version of Alix Kates Shulman's recently published novel, "Memoirs of an Ex-Prom Queen." In addition, Mrs. Perry will collaborate on the screenplay with Mrs. Shulman.

Mrs. Perry, who has given us powerful portraits of troubled women in the past — most notably in David and Lisa, Last Summer, and Diary of a Mad Housewife — will be dealing here with a girl whose trouble is that she is so pretty and so popular that she is voted queen of the prom. And then of course the real problems begin — ranging from disastrous sexual adventures to marriage, to a rejection of the traditional passive female role, to a determination to find her true identity.

Mrs. Perry's strong views on Hollywood's failure to show the American woman in a realistic light are not exactly unknown, and it is apparent that she feels her new film will go a long way toward righting some of the wrongs of the past.

Bessie Smith, the great blues singer who died in 1935, will be the subject of a movie which will begin shooting here next January. Based on "Bessie," Chris Albertson's biography that is scheduled for publication by Stein and Day, the film will be produced by Porter Bibb, with Albertson serving as associate producer.

Bibb, who is white, has not yet chosen a star for "Bessie," but he has signed Bill Gunn, the black author of "The Landlord," to write and direct.

The Latent Image, a resourceful Pittsburgh TV commercial company, somehow came up with a movie back in 1968 that has turned out to be a cultists' delight. Called The Night of the Living Dead, it was written and directed by George Romero for a modest $114,000 and has so far grossed in the neighborhood of $3 million. In case you never saw it or never even heard of it, "Living Dead" dealt — in loving detail — with the efforts of several resurrected corpses to gobble up a handful of people holed up in a farmhouse.

Now comes the big news that the Latent Image has still another treat in store for us. This one, called "The Crazies," will let us know what happens when a plane carrying biological warfare devices crashes somewhat clumsily into the water supply of poor old Evans City, Pa.

'Spending Like Drunken Sailor,' McGovern Says of Nixon Policy

McGovern evoked that image, along with that of a fictional gambler who never let anybody see the dice, as he said the president has made a fraud of Republican talk about balanced budgets and a sound dollar.

From Boston to Buffalo, McGovern assailed the administration for spending he called wasteful and irresponsible.

And McGovern said the critics who accuse him of advocating programs that would double taxes are talking through their hats.

McGovern, in a statement prepared for a Buffalo rally, said Nixon is trying to escape his own responsibility "for the mammoth budget deficit projected for 1973" by blaming a Democratic Congress.

That deficit is projected at up to $30 billion. McGovern said the total deficit during Nixon's first term may exceed $100 billion. He said it is the product of "Mr. Nixon's engineered recession" of business tax cuts and of war spending.

McGovern described as a "political con game" administration calls for a $250-billion federal-spending ceiling.

Even with such a ceiling, McGovern said, it is a good bet that South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu "will get every penny he wants."

"And Mr. Nixon will continue his drunken-sailor spending habits on military overkill and waste," he said.

McGovern flew to upstate New York Tuesday night after a Boston rally drew a crowd which he said strengthened his conviction that the polls are wrong. They show him running far behind Nixon.

Police estimated the Boston turnout at 50,000.

"We may be seeing another rerun of what happened in 1948," McGovern said, recalling the upset victory of former president Truman.

In Washington, it was announced that McGovern will unveil a plan next Tuesday to end the Indochina war.

It will be part of an intensive anti-war campaign by his supporters during the Columbus Day holiday weekend.

McGovern "will tell America what Richard Nixon cannot: how a president of the United States can bring all of our servicemen out of Vietnam and back to America," said Lawrence O'Brien, chairman of McGovern's Democratic presidential campaign.

But Vice-President piro Agnew hinted that the Nixon administration may have some peace developments of its own to announce.

There are "some things I can't relate" concerning attempts to settle the war, he told reporters in Great Falls, Mont., Tuesday.

Future of Music Belongs to Rock Says Conductor

By IAIN MacLEOD

LONDON (CP) — Elmer Iseler, conductor of the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir, thinks the future of music may lie with rock composers.

At home in Toronto, surprisingly enough for a musician who has spent most of his career working with the classics, one of Iseler's favorite albums in a well-stocked record collection is the rock opera Jesus Christ Superstar.

"Classical music, despite its greatness, may be on the way out," Iseler said in an interview after his 190-strong choir had performed for the first time in one of London's famous Promenade Concerts at the Royal Albert Hall, singing music by Bach, Stravinsky and other composers.

"Much of the so-called avant-garde today is rubbish. We have to look to the young composers who work in the field of rock music for the music of the future."

USED BRASS BAND

Iseler has yet to introduce pop-oriented works to his choir's repertoire, although he feels that this type of music may replace many of the ensemble's classical pieces in future.

"I can see the day when I will use the electric guitar behind the singers," he said.

During the choir's successful tour of several European cities, there have been signs of Iseler's progressive ideas. While incorporating the accepted choral backing of organ and orchestra, the 50-year-old conductor sometimes added the unusual support of a five-piece brass band.

"The brass quickly established itself as an integral part of the choir's sound on this tour," he said. "It added another dimension to the sound, especially in the church settings in Paris."

Iseler, who attracted sartorial attention in London with his snappy evening ensemble — a blue silk frock-coat with flowing red bow tie — has worked with the Toronto Mendelssohn for eight years. Before that, he taught music at schools and universities in Canada.

A graduate of the University of Toronto, he formed a 40-member professional ensemble, the Festival Singers, in 1955. While this group continues to perform separately, it was incorporated into the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir when Iseler took over.

Earlier in his career he worked closely with the late Igor Stravinsky, conducting recitals and recordings of the composer's work.

"When Stravinsky died, it was a great and terrible loss to music," Iseler said.

TO TOUR AGAIN

"Now, apart from the buzz of activity in pop music, there is little left. Britten is producing very little. Stockhausen is either so far advanced that no one can understand him, or simply rubbish."

Iseler said he feels he has reached the peak of his career with the European tour.

"Our receptions have been very moving everywhere.

"The concert at the Albert Hall produced an electric reaction between choir and audience which I have never experienced before. It was fantastic to see so many young people in the audience clapping their hands above their heads as if they were at a rock concert."

Iseler hopes to return to Europe every year with the Festival Singers and the Mendelssohn Choir alternately.

Annual Checkup 'No Good'

OTTAWA (CP) — Most people generally believe that if everyone had a regular health check-up and had extensive laboratory screening tests, general health would improve, hospital stays would be shorter and health care costs would drop.

That isn't necessarily so, says a recent article in the Canadian Family Physician.

Dr. David L. Sackett of McMaster University, Hamilton, concludes that much more research needs to be done before mass screening programs and routine health checks are instigated on a regular basis.

"I do not conclude that all screening is worthless," he said, but added:

"With the exception of prescriptive screening among highly selected groups of patients, existing screening and periodic health examination programs carry little promise of improving or maintaining the health of the general population and should not, therefore, be generally applied at the present time."

WILL PATIENTS OBEY?

Dr. Sackett looked at existing programs in the light of six questions and asked:

"Is there a reasonable expectation that patients without symptoms will faithfully take medications or follow other instructions over long periods of time?

"The reader may wish to ponder his own success in modifying cigarette consumption or food intake. . . ."

Dr. Sackett also questioned whether periodic health examination really alters disease outcomes. If so, statistics should have shown decreases in the death rates from cervical cancer among British Columbia women because that province started its screening programs long before other provinces.

But studies had not indicated these lower rates.

In a similar example, he reported on a United States study, which divided a population into two groups, one of which received annual check-ups and laboratory testing.

"After seven years of the program, no favorable health impact of the annual check-up could be detected among women, and only one group of men (ages 45-54) showed any differences in disability and absenteeism."

QUESTIONS METHODS

The usual methods of evaluating early detection programs also were examined by Dr. Sackett and found wanting scientifically.

What happened in many clinical studies was that they compared the length of the illness from the time it was diagnosed—early in the screening processes compared with later in regular routine—instead of comparable stages of the illness.

Dr. Sackett said there are important baseline data to be learned from regular check-ups.

As well, the doctor-patient interaction that goes on as part of the routine health examination may have "a profoundly favorable effect on the physical, social and emotional function of the patient."

"However, I must express concern that the increased automation of such programs defeats, rather than promotes, this interaction."

Although the idea of such programs is "enormously attractive," Dr. Sackett advises more research and a more rational approach before governments jump on the bandwagon.

"Since medical care costs are already rising at a rate exceeding the rise in gross national product, it seems imperative that finite resources be allocated to preventive and curative medical services in such fashion that the patient's health is, indeed, served."

Pupils Protest

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Hundreds of anti-Marxist high school pupils swirled through downtown streets Tuesday, engaging in skirmishes with riot police and water cannon trucks. The pupils, most of whom belong to the opposition-controlled Federation of Secondary School Students, were protesting the appointment of a Marxist as principal of a girl's high school. Several pupils were reported injured.

VD in Canada: The Tip of the Iceberg

OTTAWA (CP) — Rates of venereal disease continued to shoot up during 1971 with 36,897 cases reported—and health officers say this probably represents only about 10 per cent of the true number.

The rate reached a national average of 170 cases for every 100,000 population, Statistics Canada figures show. This is an increase from 159 cases per 100,000 population in 1970.

The 1971 rate is the highest in Canada since 1950, during the post-Second World War epidemic and when penicillin was still being called a "wonder drug" for treatment.

Statistics Canada reports that the lowest rate was reached in 1959, when only 97 cases for every 100,000 persons were reported. Rates have crept up gradually every year since.

Rates for the venereal diseases, which include syphilis and gonorrhea, were higher in 1971 than the combined rates of German measles, strep throat infections, scarlet fever and hepatitis. These were the next most common reportable public health diseases.

Dr. John Davis, chief of the epidemiology service of the national health department, said in an interview that the figures probably don't reflect the accurate picture of venereal disease in Canada and that the true rate is much higher. Many doctors did not report cases to the VD control clinics as required by law.

The figures for the Northwest Territories—5,047 cases for every 100,000 persons—probably give a more accurate reflection of the true picture, he said.

Studies on women of child-bearing age show that between five- and 15-per-cent rates of infection are common.

The number of cases includes "repeaters"—those persons who have more than one infection in a year, he noted.

Even assuming that half the cases are repeats, the statistics mean that one out of every 40 persons had VD in the Northwest Territories.

Rates such as these make VD only slightly less "rare" than the common cold.

If syphilis and gonorrhea were "respectable" diseases, such as Hong Kong flu, such statistics would have doctors and public health clinics in an uproar.

FEW PROBLEMS FOR STEAM BUS

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A steam-powered bus has finished nine days of regular passenger service here in a program designed to reduce smog in urban centres, the AC Transit Co. has announced.

The bus, developed by Berkeley engineer William Brobeck, covered 353 miles in the first phase of a month-long public demonstration, the company said Monday.

No operational problems involving water or fuel were reported, but some passengers complained of fumes from a mixture of fuel and air.

Fish Part Of Stew In Newfie

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Fish is the big thing in the federal riding of Burin-Burgeo which covers most of insular Newfoundland's south coast.

Both Transport Minister Don Jamieson, seeking re-election in the riding in the Oct. 30 federal election, and his Progressive Conservative opponent, Max Keeping, are prepared for the mixture of fish and politics they'll meet during an arduous campaign by boat, plane and car.

The two also talk about isolation caused by lack of roads, intermittent or non-existent television and telephone reception in some areas and rural development.

There also are indications that a personality clash could develop between Mr. Jamieson, 51, and the 30-year-old Conservative candidate, a native of Grand Bank, one of the riding's major fishing ports.

Mr. Keeping, who quit his job as parliamentary reporter with the CTV network to run in Burin-Burgeo, and Mr. Jamieson, a former St. John's broadcaster, have known each other since the early 1960s.

Mr. Keeping said in an interview in St. John's he respected Mr. Jamieson in Ottawa but now accused him of failing to use his influence as Newfoundland's only representative in the federal cabinet to tackle important fishery problems.

Those problems likely will take up much of their vote-gathering efforts, especially federal handling of persistent complaints that foreign fishing ships are sweeping away the livelihood of Burin-Burgeo residents.

Some of the world's richest fishing grounds lie little more than a day's sail by trawler from major centres in the constituency.

On the banks, as Newfoundlanders call the continental shelf, trawlermen from such ports as Grand Bank, Harbour Breton, Gaultois, Burgeo, Ramea and Fortune must compete with giant factory ships from the Soviet-bloc countries for available fish stocks.

Spokesmen for south coast fishermen have left little doubt in recent months that they want all foreign vessels governed by Canadian fish conservation measures. So do the owners of the district's 10 fish plants, some of which employ more than 350 at peak periods.

There have been repeated demands that Ottawa take unilateral action if necessary in assuming control and management of all fish stocks on the continental shelf. The shelf extends from 50 miles to 350 miles off the Newfoundland coast.

With the exception of Port aux Basques, a terminal port for Canadian National ships, and the Bay d'Espoir area, site of a hydroelectric generating station, the entire riding depends on the basic fishery and associated service industries for its economic well-being.

There was little doubt the candidates would be expected to explain their ideas for improving the fishery's health.

Mr. Jamieson retained the riding with 8,673 votes in the 1968 election and later became transport minister in Prime Minister Trudeau's cabinet.

He is counting on this year's completion of paving of the 140-mile road down the boot-shaped Burin Peninsula to attract votes. Much of the paving was done with federal money.

In the last election, Bob McGrath, a Port aux Basques dentist armed with just $200 from the Conservative party, polled 5,430 votes. D. Barton, a New Democratic Party candidate, got 755.

Mr. Jamieson, first elected in a byelection in 1966, is using his private 36-foot boat to visit isolated communities in the campaign.

Mr. Keeping planned to hire a fishing boat for part of the campaign.

The Conservative said he would stress the need for a separate federal fisheries department.

The party and Newfoundland fishery interests have maintained that last year's inclusion of the fisheries department in the new environment department was detrimental to the industry.

Scattered Shrubs Help Ward Off Early Frosts

The frost of last week reached all but the most sheltered gardens, writing off the tender summer plants which were still full of bloom.

Those with perennial tuberous roots like dahlias and begonias should now have the tubers lifted from the soil for storage. Those with top growth to be kept from further harm, such as fuchsias, need some extra thought.

In a garden having large plantings of established shrubs there will be sheltered spots where fuchsias in pots and baskets can be set into the ground for winter, and just before hard frost is expected the lower six or eight inches of stems will be given a protection of dry soil, dry peatmoss, sand or even dry leaves.

The plants are much better kept like this outdoors than trying to cope with them in the heated home. Only the most tender hybrid fuchsias would be likely to succumb outdoors in our normal winters if protected as suggested.

A greenhouse with a minimum of 40 degs.F. is ideal, for there the plants can spend winter below the benches and then be re-activated by the end of February or early March.

Overhead light and sunshine soon start new shoots on the cut-back branches when the time comes to soak the plants with water at the end of winter. Geraniums can get the same treatment in a greenhouse.

Noticing gardens in varying locations at the weekend, the frost factor was seen as quite absent from gardens in high rocky locations, and in gardens having established shrub and tree plantings.

In open situations where a complete plot of ground was given over to vegetables or herbaceous flowers without benefit of shrub protection, frost has blackened every plant not completely hardy.

This fact brought forward again a strong argument in favor of irregular shrub plantings on a single lot rectangular property. They offer protection from frost and wind to groups of smaller plants growing nearby, thus cutting plant losses to a minimum during winter as well as persuading early spring plants to give their beauty ahead of exposed gardens.

During this October period of garden re-designing, a wonderful opportunity exists to move some of the permanent plants to spots where they will provide shelter for those needing it.

A vegetable plot will get better results if situated where shn is trapped but northeast wind is screened in early spring. Perhaps two small plots will fit your plan better than one large flat area, and also receive shelter assistance from existing shrubs.

A southeast or southwest gentle slope will be an early plot if sheltered on the northeast. And don't dismiss as a crazy notion that you put a bulky shrub or two into the vegetable plot to furnish desirable local shelter.

Remember, you are no longer using harmful, long-residual poisonous sprays in the home garden. You can now plant ornamentals among the food plants, or radishes in the shrub border.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal is presented as another in the series of bridge "mysteries." You are informed that our South declarer misplayed the hand, and thereby went down at a vulnerable small-slam contract that should have been fulfilled. It is your job, in the role of bridge detective, to find South's error.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

SOUTH

◇ A Q
♣ K 10 9 7 3 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2♣	Pass	3♣	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5◇	Pass
6♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

Both South and North bid poorly. South's opening two-club bid was a distinct overbid; and his decision to bid a slam, knowing that his side was missing an ace, can be justified only by the fact that North's five-diamond Blackwood response made it impossible for a reversion to five clubs. And North's direct raise to three clubs on only a doubleton was, purely and simply, a bad bid. North's better response would have been two diamonds. And if South then rebid two notrump, North would have raised to three notrump.

After his ace of spades had won the opening lead, West continued with a low spade, South's queen winning. A low trump was then led to dummy's ace. On this lead, West played the queen.

Declarer now thought for quite a while, trying to determine whether West possessed the singleton queen, or whether West had "falsecarded" with the queen from the doubleton Q-J combination. When he next returned the board's six of trumps, and West followed suit with the five, South chose to insert his ten, finessing against East's hoped-for jack. West's jack of trumps now took the setting trick. And to sort of rub it in, West then led another spade, which East ruffed. Thus South incurred a loss of 200 points.

Declarer was illogical in his thinking. If West's queen of trumps were a singleton, then East had started with the J-8-5-4. And in this setup, even if South's finesse of the ten had won the trick (in theory), East would still have the doubleton J-7 remaining. Thus East would always make his jack of trumps.

Therefore, as South should have viewed the situation, his sole hope of fulfilling the contract depended on West's queen being a falsecard. Specifically, unless West had started with the doubleton Q-J, declarer was sunk. Hence, on the second trump lead, South should have put up his king — and everything would have been lovely.

"My coffee's getting cold," sail Bill. "I'm waiting for cream and sugar."

Bill managed to keep his cool. "Is that so? Well, I've been checking your other customers," he told her. "Twelve took sugar, seven cream, three took both, and the other two took neither."

How many other customers."

9 IN MEMORIAM

HUTCHINSON — Treasured memories of our dear mother, grandmother, great-grandmother and great-great-grandmother, Maud Anne, who passed away October 4th, 1965.
Gracious, gentle mother
Always, sweet and kind—
You only saw the good in folks,
And to their faults were blind.
God's taken you to Heaven —
Where all is Joy and Mirth,
But the place you left so empty,
No one can fill on earth.
—Missed so deeply by her family.

McKAY—In loving memory of my dear Husband, Angus McKay, who passed away October 4th, 1970.
He filled the unforgiving minute with sixty seconds worth of work well done.
—Still sadly missed by Nan and Family.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

What Causes Ankles to Swell?

There are a number of unfortunate persons — usually women — who feel very embarrassed because they have a swelling of one or both legs, around the ankles. If someone presses a finger into the swollen tissue, an indentation will be left.

This condition is called lymphedema. The lymph is the milky fluid that bathes the cells, much as the blood does. The swelling is mainly in the layer of tissue under the skin. It seems to be due to come congenital abnormality of the tiny vessels that carry the lymph away from the tissues.

In many cases the swelling of one leg is due to diseased veins. If both ankles are swollen the doctor will probably want to check the person's heart and kidneys, because disease of these organs can cause swelling of the ankles. Also a marked anemia can cause the legs to swell.

In some cases, however, a person with swollen ankles can be healthy. The enlargement of the legs in some cases is due partly to the lymphedema and partly to the accumulation of fat under the skin; every stout woman with large legs ought to see what a good reduction diet will do to help her. The condition does not endanger life, but when it is disfiguring, it can cause much mental distress.

Some surgeons have operated with the idea of removing the layer of swollen tissue, while others say the operation has not always been successful.

In occasional cases, especially in men, I've seen lymphedema clear up after curing a bad case of athlete's foot. In one case, apparently the yeast-like parasite that was causing the inflation between the toes had passed through the skin and into the lymph vessels, where it caused the obstruction.

If I had swelling in my ankles, I would want to sleep each night with the lower end of my bed elevated, perhaps with the help of a sofa cushion under the mattress. Then in the morning, the edema would be gone.

Many infants born to heroin-addicted mothers are addicted and ill when they come into the world. Recently, in a release from the Long Island Jewish Medical Centre, I read a statement by Dr. Rita Harper, who says that of late there has been an astronomical increase in the number of heroin-addicted babies that they are seeing now.

For example, in 1969 and 1970 at Kings County Hospital in New York City, an average of 20 babies each year were born of addicted mothers. Now, they treat at least 10 a month.

Of 40 addicted babies that were seen recently, all but six showed signs of what is called withdrawal. The severity of the symptoms depends on how much heroin the mother has been taking during her pregnancy.

The addicted infants have tremors, fever and difficulty breathing. Although they eat voraciously, they lose weight. They may vomit, sneeze, cry excessively, and run their skin raw. Obviously a pregnant woman, if she wants a normal child, must not take heroin.

1972 500 cc. four cylinder Honda. Occasionally we have a few good but hard-to-sell boats. When this happens, ELDER BOSUN says "Hold a Dutch Auction". The moment price reflects the fair market value. It is reduced each week by $50. This continues until someone buys the boat or we give it away. This week's Dutch Auction boat is a 26' Thunderbird. 16 feet wide with a 50 hp Johnson motor which although a collector's item, is still working. Starting price is $4,000. It will be reduced $250 each week until sold. Don't be disappointed if you are not the first person to see this boat. Remember, you have to be quick to get a bargain. This Flying Doctor's Female

By KEN POLE

MOOSE JAW, Sask. (CP) — When Wendy Clay joined the Canadian Forces in 1965 she planned to stay only long enough to make up her mind what she was going to do when she finished medical school.

Now 29, she's a major and base surgeon in charge of the medical program at the large Forces training centre near this south-central Saskatchewan city.

She's also the first woman to take jet training with the Canadian Forces. Her interest in jet flying is purely medical.

Dr. Clay graduated from the basic course which introduces fledgling pilots to the challenges of jet flying and, with 150 hours on single-engined jets behind her, she feels qualified to discuss problems that crop up during training.

ATTITUDE CHANGED

"One of the biggest things," she explains, "are the psychological factors.

"I can say I've had a fair amount of jet experience but it's one thing entirely to go up as a casual passenger where you can do wrong and then to go up as a student.

"I took the student program with all the stresses; I didn't cut the program down and it wasn't cut down for me. I went through the whole thing and the stresses that an ordinary student will undergo.

"It gives me a sense of competence to know that I can get up there and talk to them, knowing that I've experienced just about every one of the things that I'm talking about.

"I'm sure that when I first came here, there were a lot of times students would come in about problems and they'd sort of look at me and think 'she's a female and she's not a pilot, so how can she possibly understand what it is I'm trying to tell her?'

"Well, there's not that attitude any more because they know I understand it."

Flying isn't new to the native of Terrace, B.C. She has logged 350 hours as a private pilot in propeller-driven aircraft. She started in 1969 and it's become an over-riding passion.

She also has her commercial ticket and hopes to try for an instructor's.

Dr. Clay took her medical training at the University of British Columbia and graduated in 1967. She interned at Toronto General Hospital and her first posting as a Forces medical officer was to CFB Trenton in Ontario. She joined in 1965 as an officer cadet and became a captain in 1968 when she became a full-fledged member of the Forces.

"They sent around a little circular saying what a great idea it would be to join the service and how much they'd pay if I joined. And since I didn't have any money at the time, I didn't think it would be a bad idea.

"I had no intention of staying. I signed up for a three-year commission on completion of my internship and, as I had no plans to specialize at the time, I thought it would be three years to give me time to make up my mind about what I wanted to do.

"Then, of course, I became interested in flying and aviation medicine and decided the service was where I wanted to stay."

She said there is only one other woman flight surgeon in the Forces although there are at least a half-dozen women medical officers.

She has two other medical officers and two nurses as well as seven medical assistants and some administrative staff in her 10-bed hospital.

NO MAJOR SURGERY

"We don't handle really too much more than minor illnesses. Any minor surgery we can do, but anything requiring general anaesthetic or more major, we have to send downtown because we have neither the staff nor the facilities."

Dr. Clay said she can't see any reason, other than an over-supply of qualified male applicants, why more women shouldn't take military flying training.

"One reason, I suppose, is the same as why they were rather reticent about taking women in as medical officers for a while. Let's face it, they were spending an awful lot of money and the average woman probably does want to get married. It's a lot of money if the girl's going to turn around in one or two years and get out."

She's not averse to marriage. It's just that she hasn't had what she calls "appealing offers" recently.

"Basically, there's no physical or emotional reason why a qualified woman should not receive pilot training. Goodness knows, they were flying military aircraft in the war. They weren't military pilots, but they were ferrying Lancaster bombers back and forth across the Atlantic and getting far more 'military' hours than I'll ever get."

Dr. Clay said she has seen students "go to pieces" in situations which other people manage calmly. It's part of her job to find out why.

JAIL FIRE BURNS POLICE, INMATES

TACOMA, Wash. (CP) — Seven police officers and three prisoners suffered burns or smoke inhalation Monday night when fire broke out in the Tacoma City Jail.

A jail spokesman said their condition was not considered serious.

The fire was brought under control about an hour after it started. Cause of the fire was not known.

$1 Million Offer on Colosseum

LOS ANGELES — Fausta Vitali, a real estate agent, was on her way to Rome today with a certified cheque for $10,000, to be offered as down payment on the Roman Empire's most imposing ruin — the Colosseum.

Financier Thomas Merrick, 57, wants to bid for it, saying he will pay $1 million for the ruin to save it, hoping to attract another $1 million to pay for much needed repairs.

Merrick has said that if he can buy the monument, he will charge admission to it to recover the restoration expenses, splitting the take with the Rome government.

ROME — Ulderico Moranda doesn't just want to draw a salary. He wants to work for it. Morando, a white-collar worker at the state electrical corporation Enel, has filed a damage suit against his employers.

He said that when the company moved to new premises last year, it kept him on the payroll but left him alone in the old office with nothing to do.

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Three members of the rock group Jefferson Airplane, including lead singer Grace Slick, were fined Tuesday on charges stemming from a disturbance at a concert here Aug. 21.

Miss Slick and guitarist Paul Kantner had been charged with assaulting a police officer but were allowed to enter guilty pleas to a lesser charge of obstructing an officer.

Both were fined $50 and given suspended 30-day sentences.

Equipment manager Charles Cassady was charged with profanity. He pleaded no contest, was found guilty and fined $15 plus court costs.

NEWARK, N.J. — Legendary numbers kingpin Joseph Moriarty has been ordered by a federal court judge to pay more than $1.5 million in back income taxes.

U.S. district court judge James Coolahan issued the judgment against Moriarty Tuesday.

U.S. attorney Herbert Stern, whose office represented the Internal Revenue Service in the case, said the money represented unpaid federal income taxes for the years 1960 and 1961.

He claims a record of 257 miles of continuous walking he set last April.

Chief warrant officer at the Canadian Forces Base here, Latulippe is expected to reach his goal by evening.

NEW YORK — Diamond merchant Harry Winston has purchased the Star of Sierra Leone, the world's third largest diamond, for "several million dollars."

Winston intends to exhibit the stone in the world's leading museums in the next two years.

A portion of the fees acquired from the showings will go to charity.

He said an attempt will be made to cut the diamond and that he hopes it will result in about 400 carats of polished diamond.

In its current rough state, the gem weighs about 970 carats.

LONDON — Hugh Cudlipp, head of a British publishing group, announced Monday he will retire at the end of next year when he reaches the age of 60 in order to make way for younger men.

"It has been my view for a long time that people in the top creative jobs in publishing should be eager and happy at a certain time to hand over to younger men," he said in a statement.

VANCOUVER — Former attorney-general Leslie Peterson says he was not consulted by Social Credit leader W. A. C. Bennett before Bennett publicly suggested he contest a byelection in Okanagan South.

Convict Sues Over Donation

LEWISBURG, Pa.—A convict has filed suit against prison officials because he says they won't let him contribute to George McGovern's presidential campaign fund.

He is serving a 10-year term at the federal penitentiary here.

Acting as his own attorney, Owens charged that Marvin Hogan, the warden, and the chief parole officer, were "acting under color of law to discriminate against" him.

Prison authorities control money earned by convicts and the parole officer can authorize prisoners to draw from their accounts to meet emergencies at home.

Return Visit

OAKLAND, Calif. — "Yes, it's me again," the gunman told bank teller Francis Rhoades. Then, just as he had three days before, he demanded she hand over the money.

"This time give me all of it," Mrs. Rhoades quoted the man as saying during the latest holdup.

She said he was carrying the same nickel-plated gun he used earlier to take $800 from the Bank of America branch where she works.

The robber made off on foot this time with $1,232.

OF SEX AND WAR . . .

LONDON — Wars are less likely when national leaders get plenty of sex, Dr. William Bryan, head of the American Institute of Hypnosis, told a conference here on sex, religion and world peace.

He said the cruelty and violence of Hitler and Stalin were explained by their meagre sex lives.

"Both men apparently went months at a time without sex.

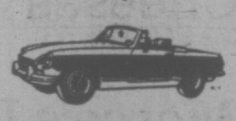

"This decreased sexual expression left a large amount of sexual potential to be sublimated in a cruel and violent manner."

On the other hand, the late U.S. President John Kennedy enjoyed a healthy sex life and was responsible for peaceful ideas and programs, Bryan said.

New Mine Firms in B.C. Must Be 51% Canadian

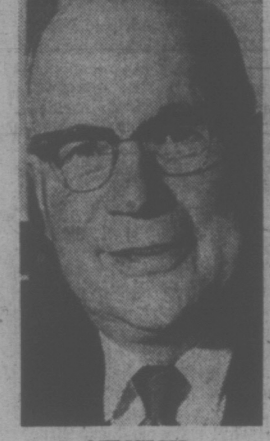

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Any mining company starting a new venture in British Columbia will have to be at least 51% Canadian-owned, Mines Minister Leo Nimsick told The Times Tuesday.

The day of foreign companies coming into the province to dig ore and ship it out of the country is over, he stressed.

Existing companies need not fear any immediate move by the provincial government to take them over, but he served warning that the time will come when the provincial government will decide to assume at least 50 per cent of all mining companies. But that day is far in the future, he said.

And, even when that day does come, American or Japanese companies which started the B.C. operations will still be able to retain 49% of them.

NIMSICK
. . . warning served

But all that is in the future.

Today the new mining policy is:

—All new mining companies starting business in B.C. must be over 50 per cent Canadian owned.

—The proposed smelter which Cominco Ltd. hopes to build at Kimberley may still be constructed. If it can be proved to be a pollution-free operation, it may get the blessing of the provincial government. An annoucement will come later.

—The proposed smelter in the Cariboo to be constructed by a consortium of companies has not got a prayer. It is based upon a tall stack dispersing sulphur dioxide fumes into the air and Nimsick said it could never be approved on that basis.

—The era of dividing the province up into clean air areas and dirty air zones is over. No mine venture will be permitted to start up anywhere in the province if it contributes to pollution. "The whole province has become a clean air zone," he said.

—The mining companies operating in B.C. have been invited to submit proposals to Nimsick on how a system of royalties may be devised to give the provincial treasury a share in non-renewable resources exported from B.C.

"The era of the free ride is over in this province. In the past, the ore has been taken out of the ground with no thought of future generations," he said.

"Now we must plan the depletion of our non-renewable resources with an eye to the future.

"We must change the thinking of mining men in this province. Mining is a one-shot resource. Even trees can be replanted but you can not replace ore once it has been mined."

Withoug planning, he said, many mining towns in the province could join the ranks of ghost towns where companies have moved in, taken the cream and left.

The two new priorities in mining are to see that it produces as many jobs as possible and that there is a reasonable return to the people of the province in the form of royalties.

—He said the Kootenay and Elk Railway can forget any plans it had to export coal from British Columbia through the United States rather than using Canadian lines to Roberts Bank.

FIGHTING WORDS

TORONTO (CP) — A Social Credit candidate in Greenwood riding for the Oct. 30 federal election is anxious for a campaign fight — literally.

George Leslie, who says he once was the Maritimes heavyweight boxing champion, would like to enter the ring against Jean Marchand, minister of regional economic expansion.

Leslie, who quoted the minister as having described Quebec Social Crediters as "psychiatric cases," said he sent Marchand a letter challenging him to a fist fight.

The letter said Marchand's comment "constitutes a foul, vicious and malicious insult and I demand satisfaction in the approved fashion of my honored Scottish forefathers."

Leslie is 63 and Marchand 53 but their weights were unavailable.

PM Promises Recreation 'Goodies'

Times News Services

SHAWINIGAN, Que. — Prime Minister Truudeau promised Canadians Tuesday a leisure and recreation program "that will leave you breathless."

He gave no details of the program but said the Liberal government would have "goodies — candies — to announce in the next week or two, certainly before Oct. 30."

He said, "I guarantee that it will leave you breathless."

Trudeau was speaking at a Liberal party meeting which renominated Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chetien in the Oct. 30 federal election.

Trudea made one other stop during the first day of his current low-key, two-day tour of the province, appearing on an open-line radio show in Trois-Rivieres, where he reaffirmed his belief in the abolition of capital punishment and said he would probably vote to continue the ban against hanging when the matter comes up in the Commons later this year.

While Trudeau concentrated on Quebec voters, Conservative leader Robert Stanfied is in Toronto where he pledged Tuesday that a Conservative government would offer tax incentives to individuals investing in risky Canadian corporations.

Stanfield disclosed for the first time on a television interview this aspect of his party's program for increasing Canadian investment in Canadian enterprises.

He was discussing the problem of foreign ownership of Canadian companies and what incentives should be offered to small businessmen similar to those now offered large corporations in Canada.

"I don't see why we can't give some tax credits, for example, up to a certain amount a year for money that's invested in risk situations," the Conservative leader declared.

"I think this could develop quite a pool of venture capital which would be available for small businessmen," he added.

Bullets Miss Ulster's Craig

BELFAST (UPI) — A man and a woman in a speeding car fired three shots today at a car carrying William Craig, leader of Northern Ireland's militant right-wing Ulster Vanguard Movement, in an apparent assassination attempt. He escaped injury but said he was badly shaken.

Two other men were found shot to death in apparently motiveless murders by what police called "back street assassins" and a bomb exploded outside a crowded bar in a Roman Catholic sector of Belfast, wounding 30 persons. The two murdered men were the 66th and 67th victims of the gang believed to kill for thrills.

The shaken Craig told police he was driving on a small country lane near Lisburn, eight miles south of Belfast, when a car behind him sped up to pass. The dark car, driven by a man with a woman in the passenger's seat, pulled level.

Then, Craig said, a gun was pushed through the window and opened fire. Craig swerved and stopped. The attackers' car sped away.

Craig told newsmen in Lisburn's police station that the first two shots did not fully register with him.

"It was only on the last shot that I was conscious that the shooting was at me," he said. "It was only confirmed a short distance up the road when I saw the bullet holes."

Police Losing Drug Battle

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police said Tuesday that while there are more drug arrests than ever before, the police are fighting a losing battle against the illicit drug trade in Vancouver.

They warned that more and more pot smokers are moving up the ladder through LSD, MDA and other soft drugs to herion.

Figures just released show that in the first nine months of 1971 there were 258 heroin possession charges and 93 trafficking charges.

In the corresponding period for 1972, 617 persons were charged with possession of herion and 151 with trafficking.

An average of 50 persons appears each day in provincial court on charges ranging from possession of drugs to trafficking. The report says a few years ago one provincial court session a week was held to handle the handful of drug cases.

Police officers point to the judicial system as a key culprit. They attack the new bail reform system and complain that the courts are handing out lenient sentences.

"We can't keep the drug pedlars off the streets," complained one officer. "No sooner do we bring them in than they are released."

In the past two months, a special squad of eight officers has been concentrating on soft drug enforcement to free veteran drug squad police to crack down on the heroin trade.

B.C. LOTTERY . . . IN TIME

Premier Barrett indicated Tuesday night his government will go ahead with plans for a provincial lottery system, when it has the time.

Barrett, speaking on a New Westminster radio program, said the lottery will be introduced "as soon as we can have a good go."

"But we've got an awful lot of legislation on our plate at this point . . . I don't want to give a specific date and disappoint anybody," he said.

Last week Attorney-General Alex MacDonald said B.C. is in the process of studying the lottery systems in operation in some of the Prairie provinces and was considering instituting one in this province.

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

A management consultant's report released today says the bureaucracy of Greater Victoria School Board is not overstaffed but it recommends streamlining the operation and giving more responsibility in finance and hiring to principals.

School board chairman Allan McKinnon said the board had given the go-ahead for the recommended job rescheduling and had referred other recommendations for consideration.

McKinnon noted that although he had been voted to office on a platform of reducing school board bureaucracy, staff reductions necessitated by financial constraints and effected more than a year before the report was commissioned had cut some 22 positions in the administration, with an annual reduction in direct salaries of $250,000.

He said the administrative streamlining would not reduce school costs.

The $13,500 report, drawn up by Price, Waterhouse Associates of Vancouver, created a set of new jobs and job descriptions for most board executives.

One of the major changes relieves the secretary-treasurer of his business responsibilities and creates a director of business.

School construction and maintenance will be handled by a director of school support and instruction will be divided betwen an administration and a curriculum chief.

Under a system of "responsibility accounting," which would extend throughout the senior levels, school principals would be made responsible for information and maintenance of their own school budgets.

Norman Alban, spokesman for Price, Waterhouse, said responsibility accounting was "a method of informing those responsible for various operations."

Since schools account for 90 per cent of the board's $26 million annual budget this means the principal will be made responsible for setting school budgets, he said.

McKinnon said a closed board meeting Tuesday night balked at the report's suggestion that pay of the top 20 officials should be scaled and defined.

Gunman Kills 3

ANGOULEME, France (AP) — A man opened fire with a carbine in a crowded department store today, killing three children and seriously wounding several employees.

The gunman was identified by employees as a man who had been wandering through the store for several days, buying nothing and laughing without reason.

He was disarmed by a policeman who happened to be in the store.

Canadian, U.S. Drug Prices 'The Highest'

By DAVE ABLETT
Special to The Times

WASHINGTON — Giant pharmaceutical companies are charging U.S. and Canadian druggists three and four times as much as druggists elsewhere for the same amount of the same drug.

The huge differences are revealed in a nine-country survey of 20 widely used drugs, including antibiotics, contraceptives, antihistamines and tranquillizers.

The druggists' cost is a major factor in the price eventually paid by someone who walks into a drugstore with a prescription.

According to the survey, Swedish druggists, for example, mark up their pharmaceuticals an average of 45.3 per cent.

The Canadian markup is believed to be in the same range.

The survey, inserted in the U.S. Congressional Record by Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin to support a drug-price control bill, was prepared by two U.S. government researchers, Edmond Jacoby and Dennis Hefner.

Jacoby and Hefner concluded cautiously that the drug price differences between various contries are "significant."

Some of the differences they said, may be due to labor costs, market size and other economic factors.

But they added: "General knowledge of the total problem suggests that it would be unwise to assume that price discrimination exercised by drug producers is a minor factor."

The survey was based on price lists from 1968, 1969 and 1970 — just as a worldwide inflationary surge was beginning.

To get a proper comparison, Jacoby and Hefner put everything in terms of the U.S. dollar price for 100 tablets or capsules of the 20 drugs.

The same company or a licensee sells each drug in the nine countries.

The 20 drugs were chosen on the basis of importance in the U.S. drug markets — all were among the 50 most prescribed drugs in the U.S.

While the survey was main ly aimed at showing the high prices U.S. druggists paid, the survey also showed that Candian druggists — and as a result Canadian consumers — were not much better off.

Among the more striking findings about costs to Canadian druggists:

Canadian druggists paid $10.69 to Ely Lilly company for V-Cillin-K, an antibiotic. Lilly sold the same amount to British druggists for $2.40 under the same brand name.

Canadian druggists paid $3.06 to Hoffman-Laroche for Gantrisin, a sulfonamide. The New Zealand price, the lowest among the nine countries, was $1.11.

Canadian druggists paid $5.29 to Lilly for an analgesic, Propoxyphene HCL, sold in Canada as Darvon.

New Zealand druggists paid $1.66 for the same analgesic, known there as Doloxene.

Canadian druggists' costs on another antibiotic, demethylchlortetracycline HCL, sold by Lederle as Declomycin, was $16.00.

In New Zealand, the Lederle price for Ledermycin — the same thing — was $3.87.

In one of the 20 cases was the Canadian price among the lowest — in only one case was the Canadian price as low as fourth among the nine.

In 12 of the 20 cases, Canada had the second-highest price, usually after the United States, whose druggists paid the most in 12 out of 20 cases.

Canada had the highest price in three cases, and the third-highest in four cases.

Ireland, New Zealand and Britian had the lowest prices.

The high Canadian and U.S. prices were also reflected in the average price of the 20 drugs surveyed.

The average paid by the U.S. druggist was $9.68. Canadian druggists paid $8.71.

He said that "an amazing

Saanich Considers Second Rink

Saanich indoor recreation committee Tuesday recommended a second public ice rink be provided to accommodate an over-flow demand for hockey icetime.

Aldermen voted unanimously to ask council to put a borrowing bylaw before ratepayers at the municipal election Dec. 9.

Ald. Alan Newberry suggested it was not the time to recommend a location for a new rink, but noted surveys of municipal requirements and population trends indicate the Gordon Head district.

Members of the committee acted following a presentation by three officers of Saanich Minor Hockey Association dealing with the scarcity of icetime at the municipality's only public ice surface, George Pearkes Arena.

Secretary Bruce Naylor said it may be necessary to "kick out" the younger boys participating in the minor hockey program in order to make room on the ice for those in the more critical mid-adolescent group.

Association registrar Art Moysychyn said the organization felt it was necessary to keep the juvenile players interested and active, to "keep them in sports and out of courts."

Recreation administrator Bill Young agreed with the need for more icetime and that anither ice surface should be provided with just the "bare bones" of a hockey rink.

Ald. William Noel said he favored an ice surface with limited seating capacity, but not another full-scale arena at this time.

The association said 157 boys are being denied organized icetime this season, and that four more hours a week would be needed to fit them into the minor hockey system.

Young said there was a possibility of granting the association one more hour per week, in addition to the two hours made available at the start of the season. This is time no longer needed by Royal Roads Service College which is using Juan de Fuca arena.

The association said it uses a total of 38 hours a week for some 750 boys registered in the various leagues, compared with about 25 hours and 600 boys in Victoria.

Pearkes arena is used from 5 a.m. to 2 a.m. Sunday through Thursday and 24 hours each Friday and Saturday.

Some of the beginners in the seven to 11-year-old bracket must use the ice at 5:30 a.m. to get their practice time in.

In a separate report, the recreation administrator said since Jan. 1 36,475 persons had used the arena for public skating and 120 boys had been registered in three weeks of hockey schools in the summer.

Since the opening in 1968 a total of 243,330 skaters have used Pearkes arena.

In other community recreation services, registration shows there have been 12,867 weekday golfers at Cedar Hill course and 4,375 weekend players, and 35,636 swimmers at Lambrick pool since the beginning of the year.

SPACE at a political rally for Senator George McGovern, is at a premium in Boston's Post Office Square as some listeners climb poles for a view of the happenings. Police estimated over 10,000 persons were on hand to hear the Democratic presidential nominee. (See also Page 3)

. . . MINES

He said there are as many jobs created in transport as there are in the mining for every ton of coal produced. These jobs must be protected by seeing that coal is exported along Canadian lines, he said.

—A copper smelter could be constructed on Vancouver Island if it were pollution free "and there is some remarkable progress being made in that direction right now." Pollution free smelters are possible now and there was no reason why one couldn't be constructed in the mining area at the north of the island (Port Hardy) if the need was there.

—Use of coal for thermal plants in British Columbia has the full support of the mines minister.

"There is so much cheap coal in this province that could be put to good use and I am confident the thermal plant could produce power without a lot of dirty smoke. I am sure they can solve that problem."

He said that while the low-quality coal is plentiful and worth only about $3 a ton, it is worth about $27 ton in terms of the amount of electricity that can be produced from it.

The British Columbia Energy Board report urged that thermal production rather than harness large new rivers or use natural gas in thermal plants. This fits in with the philosophy of the new mines minister.

(The energy board also urged future use of nuclear power but Premier Dave Barrett has opposed this.)

Nimsick, 64, admits to being a little surprised by the NDP sweep of the province but he is delighted that theories he has been advocating for years will at the last get tested.

Although his ideas have mellowed with the times, he is determined people and the environment be the main considerations in the economic development of the prorive.

Born in B.C., he became a socialist in the early depression years and claims the distinction of setting up the first CCF association in Canada.

He was looking around for a name for his group and read about the formation of the CCF in Calgary in 1932 and immediately adopted the name.

He became an alderman in Rossland and then was elected MLA in 1949. He has served in the legislature ever since.

He was a founding member of the Trail Local 480 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Union. He retired from his job at Cominco four years ago.

"I believe that government works better by co-operation than by coercion," he said.

"For example I think the mining companies would rather participate in planning how they can return a larger share to the provincial treasury.

"I may be naive but I think they will want to co-operate with me on this."

In any case, the task has to be done one way or the other. Premier Barrett has instructed him to come up with a royalty schedule by the start of the January session of the legislation.

"I would much rather see this done by the mining companies themselves" Nimsick said.

Joint Talks On Complex

Sidney council has asked Central Saanich and North Saanich councils to discuss building a recreation complex to serve the Saanich Peninsula on a tri-municipal basis.

Mayor Stan Dear said this week that if councils could agree on a location and cost-sharing arrangement, the complex would become a reality.

First reaction from North and Central Saanich was favorable on Monday with both councils agreeing to meet for discussion purposes.

Ald. Ted Clayards, Central Saanich declared it was time the Peninsula people stopped "free-loading" on recreation facilities in Saanich and Victoria.

"I want the Canadian businessmen, the small fellow, the big fellow and the medium-sized fellow, to be able to compete," Stanfield said.

Bulloch then asked him about the difficulties of small businessmen in Canada today in raising risk capital.

"Small businessmen getting equity capital — there's a problem," Stanfield agreed. "There is no question about that."

He said the small businessmen wanting to start new ventures shouldn't expect someone else to put up all the capital required, since they must have a substantial investment in the project to ensure they won't "throw up their hands" and leave it to someone else to rescue in times of difficulty.

Earlier the Conservative leader refined slightly his publicly-expressed position on price and wage controls, pledging that as prime minister he would impose them if necessary to stop the growth of an "inflationary psychology" among Canadians.

Stanfield explained his views in a taped interview shown in Edmonton.

Meanwhile in Montreal, New Democratic Party leader David Lewis said an NDP government would bring in firmer laws to improve the labor situation for women.

Speaking on an open-line radio show, Lewis said he favors a comprehensive network of daycare centres and salaries for housewives "because we have to find ways to make women more independent of men."

"Our laws favor men and employers favor men," he said.

"Even when laws are egalitarian, many employers find a way of getting around them by for example, creating different job classifications."

Asked to elaborate on the question of salaries for housewives, he told a caller he was talking about a social goal for which the program had not been worked out.

During the 75-minute show on the French-language station, five callers asked the NDP leader to defend his stand that it would take more than a provincial election for Quebec to secede.

When a caller asked why all federal leaders are afraid of the Parti Quebecois, Lewis replied that he is not afraid.

He said he hoped "with all his heart" Quebec would not choose separatism.

Also in Montreal Social Credit leader Real Caouette says he would move to Vancouver if Quebec separated from the rest of Canada.

Caouette said Wednesday that any clear, democratic decision by Quebecers to separate from Canada would have to be respected.

However, he would not remain in a separate Quebec but would settle in Vancouver, a city that has always attracted him.

Caouette said Claude Wagner, Quebec campaign leader for the Progressive Conservatives, is singing one song to Quebecers while Conservative leader Robert Stanfield has a different tune for Western Canada.

He said the leader of the Conservatives' Quebec campaign would respect a democratic vote by Quebecers to separate. This contradicted PC policy.

Wagner should conform to the Conservative party line because it is evident that Mr. Stanfield would never allow Quebecers the right to self-determination.

In fact, Stanfield was prepared to call a nationwide referendum to stop Quebec from separating.

example" of the effect of patent monopolies was disclosed in Canada last year during licensing proceedings on Valium and Librium, products of the Swiss company, Hoffman-Laroche, which dominates the tranquillizer field.

"During the hearings in Canada," Nelson said, "It was made clear that Roche could make Valium in its raw form at $87 per kilo (2,2 pounds).

"Roche's selling price of the final dosage form in Canada was $11,000 per kilo, or about 13,000 per cent of the price of raw materials."

According to the survey, Valium was sold to Canadian druggists for $6.01 for 100 tablest, compared to $2.46 in Ireland.

The U.S. price, the only one higher than the Canadian price, was $8.03.

Nelson also told the Senate of a 1965 case in which the U.S. licensee for a French company, Rhone-Poulenc, charged $32.62 a thousand for tablets to the U.S. defence department.

The Canadian licensee sold the same quantity of the same drug to Canada's department of veteran's affiars for $2.62 per thousand.

"When this startling 12-to-1 discrepancy was first brought to the attention of the department of defence," Nelson said: "The U.S. government ageney attempted to secure the product from the Canadian firm, but that firm's licensing agreement with the patent owner Rhone-Poulenc restricted its sales to Canadian customers only.

the weather

The broad ridge of high pressure centred just southwest of the Charlottes and responsible for the clear and cool weather gives strong indication of persisting across most of the province for the next two days.

The changes to occur will be in the north coast as an intense low pressure centre moves into the northern Gulf of Alaska later today. This will spread increasing winds into much of the north coast tonight with some rain also expected in the northern half. Temperatures to remain in the normal to cool range.

MEANING CHANGED

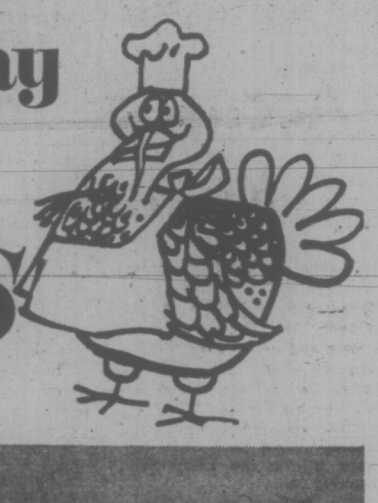

A typographical error in the Oct. 3 issue of the Times inadvertantly changed the meaning of Esquimalt-Liberal candidate's Louis Lindholm's speech to his audience at the George Pearkes Arena Monday night.

The incorrect sentence read: Crime should "not" be treated as a game, to told the audience, and Canada should "now" allow its laws to be weighed in favor of the criminal.

It should have read: Crime should not be treated as a game, he told the audience, and Canada should "not" allow its laws to be weighed in favor of the criminal.

Lindholm emphasized today that he is against permissiveness in criminal law.

B.C. RAIL CHARGED OVER SPAWN SLIDES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Environment Canada said Tuesday that charges are being laid by the fisheries service against British Columbia Railway following two slides in spring (chinook) salmon spawning areas in northwestern B.C. last week.

The slides temporarily blocked the Bear River, about 240 miles northwest of Prince George, leaving silt deposits and debris on the spawning grounds.

A news release from the Vancouver office of Environment Minister Jack Davis said "slides were triggered by roadbed construction alongside the river."

The provincially-owned railway is constructing an extension of its line to Dease Lake and it goes along the river.

Fisheries service staff Saturday flew into the area to check any slide and damage to the fishery, the release said.

It also said it was the first charge laid against a provincial corporation under amendments to the Fisheries Act last fall allowing such charges against government corporations.

Teachers Drop Suit

Their action had frozen $1,116,000 in funds for the duration of the Aug. 30 provincial election campaign.

"We felt the teachers' federation should not be involved in political action. We prevented them from getting involved, and thus we accomplished our objective," said Barker, of 804 Foul Bay.

The levy money, representing one day's pay from each of the B.C.T.F.'s 23,500 members, was to have been used for political action aimed at defeating the Social Credit government. Barker and Hall were granted an injunction in the B.C. Supreme Court last June which froze the funds.

After the injunction was granted, a teachers' political action committee was set up to collect and distribute voluntary contributions from teachers and others.

"No punitive action will be taken by the federation against teachers who did not pay the levy, and all the money will be repaid so we're not taking the matter any further," Barker said.

He said obtaining the injunction and subsequent repayment was a victory on behalf of a great number of teachers who feel political and religious convictions should be personal matters, and not something to be decided by a professional organization."

Barker said he joined the Social Credit League last spring "after 19 years in teaching without being involved with politics."

"I felt the federation should not be involved in politics, and my way of stopping it was to join the Social Credit League and launch the lawsuit," he said.

Barker said he organized the campaign of Waldo Skillings and Newell Morrison, Social Credit candidates in Victoria. He said he would not himself be seeking office in provincial politics or in the BCTF in the immediate future.

In the suit which has now been dropped, Barker and Hall claimed the political levy violated the federation's constitution and was illegal under the B.C. Societies Act. They also sought an injunction stopping the federation from suspending members who didn't pay the levy.

'Police State' Tactics Used

A Victoria Travel agent who booked passengers on a Vancouver-London charter flight which was cancelled Monday night said today air transport inspectors' methods resembled tactics of a "police state."

Tom Woodward, owner of the Four Seasons Travel Agency, was referring to a Dan Air flight arranged for members of the Canadian Ski Bob Association which was cancelled by federal authorities.

The flight which was to have left Vancouver International Airport at midnight, was cancelled after Canadian air transport inspectors found that about half of the 189 passengers were not legitimate members of the charter group.

Sources indicate that none of the 30 scheduled passengers from Victoria, were illegal passengers booked through capital city charter flight agents.

Woodward described the charter flight regulations as "ludicrous."

"The regulation that they have to be members makes interested passengers obliged to join societies they are not the least bit interested in," he said, adding officials should realize that 52 per cent of Canadian population fly charter.

He said if there were "30 angry Victorians" because of the cancellation then 30 angry letters should be written to their MLAs.

The letters might start some action and get existing charter laws requiring club membership changed.

He quoted the tale of one passenger: As the 183 passengers entered the departure lounge, they were told to line up in two's and each individual was questioned by two Transport Commission inspectors.

Thirty passengers were allowed to board the Boeing 707 jetliner, but 20 minutes later they were ordered off the aircraft and the flight was cancelled.

Woodward said he was appalled at the episode which "resembled tactics of a police state."

Bryan Yirush, regional sales manager for Dan Air, commented the company hated to cancel the flight but didn't wish to lose its licence.

He said the passengers were supposed to be members of the Canadian Ski Bob Association, or direct relatives of members, and inspectors said half of the passenger list did not qualify.

Mrs. Joy Wilson, office manager for Charter Flight Consultants in Victoria which booked about 25 of the passengers said she had been told all of the Victorians aboard were legitimate members.

She said today that as far as she knew most of the travellers had left the country on scheduled airlines.

The director of Burritt Travel Ltd., in Victoria Ken Hibbert commented his firm was not responsible for any of the cancelled flight's passengers.

Another factor in the cancellation according to a Canadian Transport Commission spokesman is many passengers only had one-way tickets even though they held so called return tickets.

He said passengers had admitted on questioning by inspectors that they were just returning overseas.

Charter laws require the carrier to bring back the original flight passengers.

Socred Choice 'Soon'

Soviet Credit MLA Frank Richter said today he expects former premier Bennett to name "within a day or two" a Socred house leader for this month's special session of the legislature.

Richter, former mines minister, said it is "accepted practice" for the official leader of the Opposition, who he said is still Bennett, to designate another MLA to sit as house leader if he is unable to attend the session.

Richter said Bennett is still on vacation.

"The prerogative of naming a house leader is not changed from past policy," Richter said.

"There will be an appointment whether the leader of the opposition is here or not. Mr. Bennett will indicate who he wants. There is no question about that."

Richter said there is a possibility Bennett may be back himself before the special session starts Oct. 17.

Manpower to Stress Training, New Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey said today that $125 million placed at his department's disposal to be divided between two continued government programs will put more emphasis on job creation and on-the-job training.

Mackasey said $85 million will be used to support Local Initiative Programs, and $40 million will pay for on-the-job training.

Both amounts were announced earlier.

Last year, the initial amounts provided to the two programs totalled $120 million, with $100 million to L.I.P. and the remainder to the training program.

The cutback from $100 million to $85 million for the L.I.P. plan was nominal, Mackasey said at a news conference.

"On-the-job training is now a permanent feature of manpower, while L.I.P. at best is an ad hoc program."

L.I.P. projects with a total cost of more than $200,000 will not be considered, Mackasey said. "There will be more projects of a smaller nature."

The maximum limit per project last year was $500,000.

He estimated that between 40,000 and 45,000 jobs will be created by the new L.I.P. plan.

The amount announced came as no surprise as Mackasey said last month that a new L.I.P. program and the federal on-the-job training plan would be financed by funds "equal to the initial amount we started with for the two programs last year."

L.I.P. received $100 million last year and the on-the-job plan $20 million initially in 1971.

Last week Mackasey said an on-the-job training program would receive $40 million this winter.

Last year L.I.P. began with $100 million and was expanded later with $50 million last January, $30 million in May and $15 million in September.

The $15 million in September was to allow 750 projects to be carried over until the end of November.

Mackasey said in a news release today that deadlines for the new L.I.P. applications will be Dec. 31, 1972. Application forms and detailed criteria by which plans will be evaluated are available at Canada Manpower centres.

Accused 'Seemed Dazed,' Reporter Tells Court

The accident at Fort and Oak Bay killed Ronald Morriss, 21, of 2720 Foul Bay. Five others, including Trueman, were injured.

The witness, Barbara McLintock, a Daily Colonist reporter, testified she was at Garden City Ambulance offices early on the morning of March 5 when the call came in on the crashh.

She said she travelled to the accident scene with an ambulance crew and saw Trueman on the street shortly after the 1 a.m. crash.

"He was pale . . . very dazed, shocked, I would say, and bleeding from the lower part of his face," Miss McLintock said.

The reporter had been asked earlier in the day to appear as a witness by Prosecutor Brain Smith.

Witnesses normally are excluded from the courtroom during proceedings other than their own testimony, but Miss McLintock, covering the trial for her newspaper, had sat through Monday's opening session of the trial.

Mr. Justice Peter Donald Seaton told the jury of 10 men and two women that the reporter's presence Monday had not detracted from the truth of her evidence.

Seaton said evidence from such a witness would not necessarily be colored through dishonesty, but could be shaded by the "power of suggestion" after listening to testimony from other witnesses.

In other evidence, Victoria Police Constable Douglas Richardson said he had conducted a breath test on the accused less than two hours after the crash.

Richardson said he had "seen higher readings before" in blood-alcohol tests, but that in his opinion the condition of the accused in the officer's post-accident investigation had warranted a test.

Richardson said Trueman had told him after blowing into the breath test machine that he was impaired "and I know it."

The trial continued today.

Welfare Plan Revived

A plan to co-ordinate all government-supported welfare services in the Capital Region which was rejected last year, by then Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi, is being revived by the Capital Regional board.

Chairman of the board, Hugh Curtis, said today a letter had been sent to the new minister Norman Levi, requesting an exploratory session and discussion of the tabled proposal.

"The proposal remains board policy," Curtis said, "so now we're just re-activating the subject under a new minister."

The proposal, which was originally drawn up for the board by the Community Council of Victoria, calls for integration of all community and social services in the capital region.

Board director Edith Gunning described the plan at the time; as a move to humanize welfare services by elimination buck-passing and bureaucracy.

The new service would hope to end the "confusing and fragmented pattern" of social services, she said, by creating a new department of the Capital Regional District under a director.

Spokesman for Levi's office said today he had received the letter last week and as yet had not given the board a reply.

Session Goes Ahead

An application by Victoria Cablevision Ltd. for a rate increase was heard today by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission in Edmonton, despite formal requests by Victoria city council and Victoria MP David Groos that the hearing be adjourned and held in Victoria. (Earlier story on Page 11.)

Groos said in a telephone interview from Edmonton that the commission members closely questioned the counsel for the applicant about the company's financial status.

Judging by the line of questioning it was "by no means certain the CRTC would grant the application," Groos said.

Making It With Mary —A New Look in Banks

I suppose there's nothing sinister or socially significant in The Royal Bank's replacement of one Mary with another Mary, a major switch in financial circles so far ignored by our business editor, but it sure as shootin' shows the incredible change in banks.

Mary Number One, a fine, big, full-bosomed girl, is currently on view in the Royal Bank's television commercials, turning over her duties as resident sex symbol to a cooler Mary Number Two, a tall, lissome number who vows to carry on the crusade, namely the maintenance of the Royal Bank's posture as an ever-loving, open-armed institution just dying to enfold you in its soft embrace.

Well, "sex symbol" may be too strong a term, but I'd doubt if any red-blooded Canadian youth could confront either Mary and keep his mind entirely on interest rates or amortization.

The message — "We can help make things happen" — will remain the same, offering errant, double-entendre thoughts to the more depraved or deprived depositors, but it is by no means a new attitude. I forget which bank it was — Montreal, I think — but there was a young lady on radio commercials who somehow managed to sound both discreet and seductive in her reminders that "We're approachable!" Toronto-Dominion, too, includes in its television spots a couple of sensational young ladies who'd bring the roses to the cheeks of any growing boy, like me.

If I seem more than merely bemused by all this it is because I am of that vintage that remembers banks every bit as intimidating as maximum security prisons. Any man or woman over the age of 45, asked to nominate the funniest piece of writing ever, would automatically select Stephen Leacock's account of his first terrified dealings with his bank. It seemed so funny because it was so true. Banks were places calculated to reduce any man to quivering jelly.

I can vividly recall, myself, the horrors of opening my first account in a gloomy mausolem long before Mary the First or Mary the Second was born. There were no approachable beauty queens volunteering to make things happen. There were only stern and suspicious old men in high, stiff collars, peering out at you accusingly through bars. Opening an account in that place with a grubby 10-dollar bill was like asking U.S. Steel to forge a bobby pin.

The whole atmosphere, whether accidental or contrived, had the effect of overwhelming the customer with the extreme respectability and staggering riches of the establishment. They cut you down right at the door to the tomb with a brass plaque announcing assets of nine hundred billion dollars. From there on you felt as if you were one of Singer's Midgets. Nobody in the lower income classes, which, of course, included newspapermen, could really understand what banks did except maybe buy tenement buildings to evict widows and orphans.

Their image, indeed, was so conservative, so hostile that it was generally, if inaccurately, concluded that the only way to get a loan from one was to demonstrate, with collateral, that you hadn't the slightest need for one. My mother, far and away the world's worst handler of money, was forever going to the bucket-shop lenders who might charge you exhorbitant interest, but did so with such gallantry and warmth that it almost seemed a social visit.

"Come to think of it, that may have been the reason that banks decided to cultivate the come-hither look. My own bank — and I say "my" because my bank encourages that and I like to humor them — transformed overnight. Huge picture windows were installed in place of the marble walls. The walls were all painted an attractive pastel green, like antiqued bank notes. The heavy bars in front of the teller's wickets were torn out. The place looked as cheerful, as bright and as inviting as a florist shop. Almost immediately there was a rush of customers and armed robbers.

Lord only knows what happened to the mean, grey, hostile old men in the celluloid collars. Perhaps they were all put out to stud in the mint. But suddenly the place was full of attractive young ladies, like Mary, who had mastered the fine art of efficiency with charm.

"Here's five dollars for my account," you would say, crimsoning, "and I love you madly."

The managers, once selected for their funereal mien, were suddenly young and amiable men, singing out a cheerful good morning to you from offices with perpetually open doors. It was all you could do to refrain from leaping into their laps, blurting out your financial woes and having a good cry.

The most astonishing change of all was the attitude that banks began taking to money. It had become a commodity they were ready, indeed eager, to have you cart away. The Royal Bank's new Mary comes right out with it. Want a cottage? A swimming pool? A fibreglass run-about? A holiday in Tahiti? Well, we can help make it happen.

Even at "my" bank — hello, there, old bank! — there are a large number of cards and pamphlets placed at strategic points to remind you that all sorts of perfectly dandy things can be done with money.

It is, one must admit, a little confusing since half these cards urge you to save for the future and the other half urge you to cart a little of the product away and live for the moment. There are no free samples, mind you, but the idea is made very clear that they've a lot of the stuff lying around in vaults and, after all, somebody ought to be using it.

My neighbor, another dirty old man, is of the opinion that Mary Number One, who tells us that she is going back to school, was sacrificed by The Royal Bank because she was ahead of her time, simply too luscious to keep the customer's mind on money. One can see it would be a problem if more clients wanted Mary than the money, but that's the way banking goes, eh, kid?

Rock Hound

Stockpiled on Store Street, mounds of rock will disappear soon, to be used for an extension of the breakwater at Oak Bay Marina. The rock comes from the excavation site at 740 Burdett where a 14-storey highrise will be built. A Pacific Pile Driving Co. official said his firm has been awarded a $179,835 contract and work will begin on the breakwater extension soon.

SAFE ROBBER KNEW COMBINATION: RCMP

A number of people knew the combination to a safe at a Shop-Easy supermarket branch in Colwood which was robbed of $12,000 Monday night, Colwood RCMP said today.

Staff Sgt. Lloyd Smith said, "The safe was not attacked. The combination was obviously used."

The theft was reported by the store's branch manager, William Pugh, shortly after he discovered the money missing about 9 a.m. Tuesday. Most of the money was in $10 and $20 bills, Smith said.

The four feet by three feet safe, located in the customer shopping area, showed no signs of being forced open and neither did the premises, said Smith.

Teachers Reinstated

The first board of reference set up under new legislation for the review of dismissals of tenured school teachers has reinstated city teachers Bona McMurchie and Evelyn Ball.

"I'm very pleased," said Miss McMurchie, who taught with the Greater Victoria school board for 30 years. "It has been a most distressing affair which has done nothing to make my health any better."

Miss McMurchie, who describes herself as "in the 60s," said she had been absent from her Grade 5 class at Margaret Jenkins Elementary School for "months" as a result of a bout of 'flu.

She said she was then suspended and dismissed on grounds of "neglect of duty."

Miss Ball of Lampson Elementary was absent for the same period for the same reasons, Miss McMurchie said. The teachers share Miss McMurchie's house at 3825 Kremlin.

Miss McMurchie said neither she nor Miss Ball had any form of income during their period of dismissal.

"It was pretty devastating on my savings," she said.

Notice of suspension came on June 26; dismissal followed on July 15.

Miss McMurchie said she had still not fully recovered from her illness. Both women said their future in teaching was "up to the school board."

Greater Victoria School Board discussed the board of reference decision in closed session Tuesday night.

The teachers were the first in the province to appeal dismissals since new laws governing tenured teachers were passed by the government at the 1972 session of the legislature.

Under the terms of the amended Public Schools Act, a school board may discharge a teacher who they believe "has been guilty of misconduct, neglect of duty, or refusal to obey a lawful order of the board;" one who has been convicted of a criminal offence if they believe it "inadvisable" that he continue teaching; or one whom they believe is incompetent.

In the case of alleged incompetence, an appeal is lodged with an appointed review commission.

A board of reference's decision is final and binding upon both the teachers and the board involved. A vindicated teacher must be reinstated.

Tuesday's decision was handed down by board of reference chairman K. S. Fawcus of Vancouver.

Lost Boys Return Safely

Two 11-year-old Saanich boys who disappeared Monday afternoon returned to their homes about 7 p.m., Tuesday, too tired to even eat a meal, Saanich police said today.

Both Robert Munro of 2909 Richmond and Michael Wowchuk of 1936 Newton were back at school today.

Mrs. Munro said today the boys got lost while hiking and could not find their way back to their bicycles before dark. They are not certain where they were but she thinks it may have been in the vicinity of Mount Douglas Park.

Robert told her the pair sat against a tree in the woods most of Monday night. They were exhausted by the time they arrived home.

Aldermen Miffed Over Trip Extras

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Before they left on a two-week civic tour of Europe last Saturday, each of the four official city representatives in the party received an extra $240 toward their expenses, the Times learned today.

The money, which was in addition to the $500 earlier approved by city council for each of the four air fares, was authorized at an informal coffee gathering following last Thursday's council meeting.

And at least two aldermen are unhappy about the way the extra money was allocated.

"We should have been told right at the outset what the trip was going to cost," Ald. Percy Frampton said today. "This request for more money shouldn't have been dropped suddenly in our laps like that."

Ald. Ove Witt said he understood the cash had been requested for three city hall officials only, and not for an alderman who was also in the party.

Ald. Tom Christie and the three officials — assistant planner Peter Crisp, traffic engineer Dave Campbell and comptroller Jim Bramley — received their $240 cheques last Friday, said assistant comptroller Mason Sheldrick.

He said the sum represented a per diem allowance of $15 for the 16-day trip.

No mention of the tour was made during the council meeting last week.

After the meetings, aldermen traditionally adjourn to the anteroom of the council chamber for coffee, and Witt said Mayor Peter Pollen raised the subject at that time last Thursday.

"Nothing was really approved, except that the mayor said he would like to tell us in advance that he would be formally asking us for the additional sum on his return."

(Pollen, who initiated and organized the tour, is leading it in a private capacity without any financial assistance from the city).

Shouldn't Be Penalized

Witt said Pollen told aldermen the trip was going to be "more expensive than we first anticpated," and he (Pollen) didn't consider it fair that those going in an official capacity should be financially penalized.

Council had originally authorized up to $3,500 toward the tour expenses, on the basis of $500 maximum per person, which would have enabled seven official representatives to go.

Only four eventually joined the party, making the city's subsidy of fares $2,000, and Witt said he told the mayor: "I can't see why you should have to ask again."

However, a "straw poll" was taken among the aldermen and approval received.

Witt said he was not aware at that time that the money would be issued in advance, although this is the practice when aldermen are going to such events as municipal conventions.

Frampton said when the subject was discussed over coffee some aldermen questioned the methods involved, particularly Ald. Alf Hoodd who complained that such matters have a habit of "cropping up at the last minute after formal approval has been given."

"I felt the same way, that at least we should have the whole picture all at one time," he added.

Frampton said the actual technique employed in this instance, of authorizing expenditure and issuing the money before formal approval of council, was one that had been used before.

At a later date, he said, it would amount to council "confirming the action of the committee of council."

Purpose of the tour is to enable planners, architects, developers and others interested in Victoria's development to study the urban planning of several European cities.

Curtis Against New Ice Rink

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said today he would not support at this time a proposed second skating rink for the municipality.

Curtis said Saanich needs extensive road and traffic improvements before embarking on a second phase of recreational development and doubted in any case that the proposal could be properly researched before the Dec. 9 election.

"I doubt that a referendum would succeed and I don't feel we should consider one particular facility in isolation. It does not have my support at this time," Curtis said.

Neither the mayor nor the municipal administrator were aware of such a proposal being put forward and Curtis said he felt it should have been referred to the full council. Four aldermen were present at the committee meeting: chairman Leslie Passmore, Alan Newberry, Fred Severson and William Noel.

The mayor felt the time inappropriate for proposing new recreational services of any kind. He said it had been his understanding and that of administrator John Tribe that council would see the completion of the fourth capital undertaking in the recreation field before considering the merits of another five-year program.

The fourth facility is Cedar Hill Community Centre, now under construction for opening next year.

There is too little time to produce a cost estimate for another ice surface, Curtis said, acknowledging the heavy demand for more icetime at George Pearkes Arena.

"I am aware of the enthusiasm of community groups and Saanich Minor Hockey Association (for more icetime), but if we consider borrowing in the near future we should be thinking of major roads and improvements to the general traffic plan," Curtis said.

Concern Mounts Over Asbestos

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

A chest specialist in Victoria has warned that many workers in the city may be in danger of contacting a cancerous lung disease from their exposure to asbestos fibres.

The doctor, who wishes his name withheld for profession reasons, said he knew of at least two men in Victoria who died "very likely from the consequences of their exposure to asbestos."

He said he knew of several workers suffering from heavy exposure right now.

The disease is contracted by breathing the minute fibres, which remain in the body permanently and act as a constant irritant.

Effects of the inhalation may take as long as 20 to 30 years to detect.

"The problem of asbestos exposure is a complicated one," he said, "which has recently been under a great deal of study."

Asbestosis is a disease which leads to scarring on the lungs or the development of one of several kinds of tumors.

The scarring is not fatal in itself, causing only shortness of breath or disability, but tumors can cause death.

Dr. Irving Selikoff, an American cancer authority, recently revealed that a rare, late-showing and fatal form of the disease, mesothelioma, has been occuring with increasing frequency among shipyard workers.

Selikoff said as many as 225,000 of the 3.25 million persons still living who worked in U.S. shipyards during the Second World War may develop the disease because of the exposure to the fibres even if the exposure was only brief.

Insulation workers, carpenters, welders, electricians, tinsmiths, pipefaggers and other tradesmen whose work does not directly involve handling asbestos are also often exposed to significant amounts of asbestos.

The local physician said Canada is investigating the disease most intensely since 80 per cent of the world's asbestos is produced here.

"Prevention is of the essence," he said, "since no treatment for the disease is known.

"Im personally troubled by the presence of this fibre and the slowness shown in taking precautions against it.

"I don't want to raise a bogey man," he added, "and most men I've treated in Victoria are aware of the dangers."

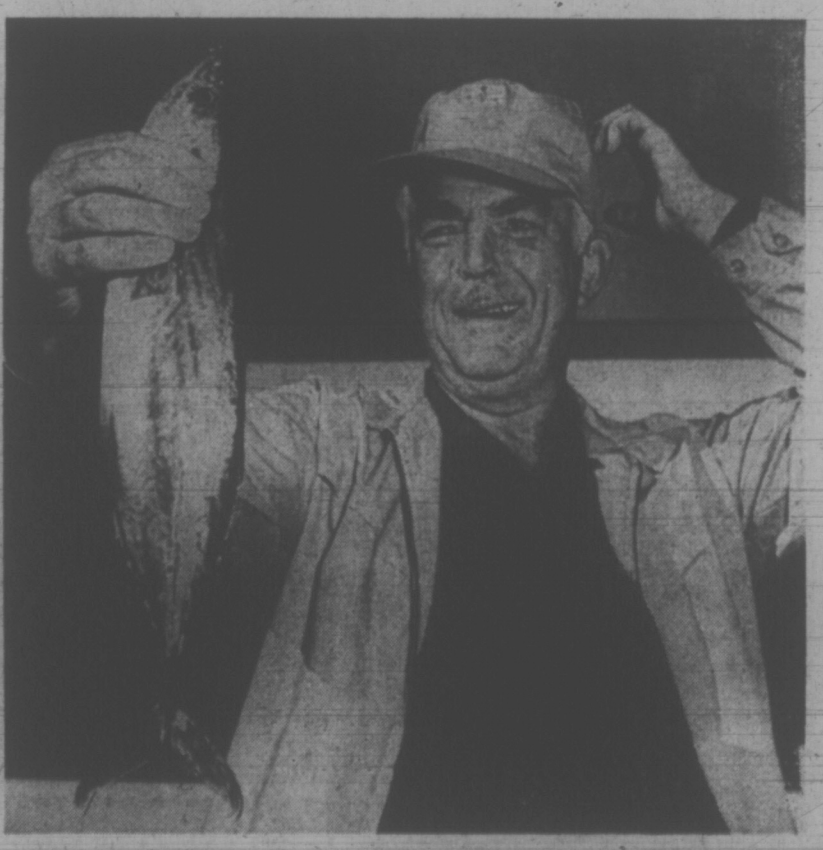

A spokesman for the Workman's Compensation Board said safety regulations were recently tightened for jobs with asbestos hazards.

It is the job of management and unions, he said, to warn employees of the risks involved in asbestos and to insure that proper safety practices, such as face masks, are followed.

The Victoria doctor said it is not only industral workers who are affected by the populace at large may be in danger.

"A recent study has shown," he said, "that 50 to 60 per cent of people who come to autopsy will have asbestos fibres in their bodies. In New York the figure is 80 per cent.

"Dr. Selikoff has speculated that lung cancer may be caused from a combination of smoke and asbestos. He feels high instance of lung cancer coincides with high increases in the use of asbestos."

OFF-COURSE TUNA chomped Les Inglis' minnow teaser off Race Rocks early Tuesday morning. Federal fisheries officials said the bad navigator was definitely an albacore tuna from southern climes and suggested recent windy Pacific weather might have steered the fish into local waters. Inglis said the tuna was scrappier than a salmon of the same size.

VD in Canada: The Tip of the Iceberg

OTTAWA (CP) — Rates of venereal disease continued to shoot up during 1971 with 36,897 cases reported—and health officers say this probably represents only about 10 per cent of the true number.

The rate reached a national average of 170 cases for every 100,000 population, Statistics Canada figures show. This is an increase from 159 cases per 100,000 population in 1970.

The 1971 rate is the highest in Canada since 1950, during the post-Second World War epidemic and when penicillin was still being called a "wonder drug" for treatment.

Statistics Canada reports that the lowest rate was reached in 1959, when only 97 cases for every 100,000 persons were reported. Rates have crept up gradually every year since.

Rates for the venereal diseases, which include syphilis and gonorrhea, were higher in 1971 than the combined rates of German measles, strep throat infections, scarlet fever and hepatitis. These were the next most common reportable public health diseases.

Dr. John Davis, chief of the epidemiology service of the national health department, said in an interview that the figures probably don't reflect the accurate picture of venereal disease in Canada and that the true rate is much higher. Many doctors did not report cases to the VD control clinics as required by law.

The figures for the Northwest Territories—5,047 cases for every 100,000 persons—probably give a more accurate reflection of the true picture, he said.

Studies on women of childbearing age show that between five- and 15-per-cent rates of infection are common.

The number of cases includes "repeaters"—those persons who have more than one infection in a year, he noted.

Even assuming that half the cases are repeats, the statistics mean that one out of every 40 persons had VD in the Northwest Territories.

Rates such as these make VD only slightly less "rare" than the common cold.

If syphilis and gonorrhea were "respectable" diseases, such as Hong Kong flu, such statistics would have doctors and public health clinics in an uproar.

FEW PROBLEMS FOR STEAM BUS

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A steam-powered bus has finished nine days of regular passenger service here in a program designed to reduce smog in urban centres, the AC Transit Co. has announced.

The bus, developed by Berkeley engineer William Brobeck, covered 353 miles in the first phase of a month-long public demonstration, the company said Monday.

No operational problems involving water or fuel were reported, but some passengers complained of fumes from a mixture of fuel and air.

Fish Part Of Stew In Newfie

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld, (CP) — Fish is the big thing in the federal riding of Burin-Burgeo which covers most of insular Newfoundland's south coast.

Both Transport Minister Don Jamieson, seeking reelection in the riding in the Oct. 30 federal election, and his Progressive Conservative opponent, Max Keeping, are prepared for the mixture of fish and politics they'll meet during an arduous campaign by boat, plane and car.

The two also talk about isolation caused by lack of roads, intermittent or non-existent television and telephone reception in some areas and rural development.

There also are indications that a personality clash could develop between Mr. Jamieson, 51, and the 30-year-old Conservative candidate, a native of Grand Bank, one of the riding's major fishing ports.

Mr. Keeping, who quit his job as parliamentary reporter with the CTV network to run in Burin-Burgeo, and Mr. Jamieson, a former St. John's broadcaster, have known each other since the early 1960s.

Mr. Keeping said in an interview in St. John's he respected Mr. Jamieson in Ottawa but now accused him of failing to use his influence as Newfoundland's only representative in the federal cabinet to tackle important fishery problems.

Those problems likely will take up much of their vote-gathering efforts, especially federal handling of persistent complaints that foreign fishing ships are sweeping away the livelihood of Burin-Burgeo residents.

Some of the world's richest fishing grounds lie little more than a day's sail by trawler from major centres in the constituency.

On the banks, as Newfoundlanders call the continental shelf, trawlermen from such ports as Grand Bank, Harbour Breton, Gaultois, Burgeo, Ramea and Fortune must compete with giant factory ships from the Soviet-bloc countries for available fish stocks.

Spokesmen for south coast fishermen have left little doubt in recent months that they want all foreign vessels governed by Canadian fish conservation measures. So do the owners of the district's 10 fish plants, some of which employ more than 350 at peak periods.

There have been repeated demands that Ottawa take unilateral action if necessary in assuming control and management of all fish stocks on the continental shelf. The shelf extends from 50 miles to 350 miles off the Newfoundland coast.

With the exception of Port aux Basques, a terminal port for Canadian National ships, and the Bay d'Espoir area, site of a hydroelectric generating station, the entire riding depends on the basic fishery and associated service industries for its economic well-being.

There was little doubt the candidates would be expected to explain their ideas for improving the fishery's health.

Mr. Jamieson retained the riding with 8,673 votes in the 1968 election and later became transport minister in Prime Minister Trudeau's cabinet.

He is counting on this year's completion of paving of the 140-mile road down the boot-shaped Burin Peninsula to attract votes. Much of the paving was done with federal money.

In the last election, Bob McGrath, a Port aux Basques dentist armed with just $200 from the Conservative party, polled 5,430 votes. D. Barton, a New Democratic Party candidate, got 755.

Mr. Jamieson, first elected in a byelection in 1966, is using his private 36-foot boat to visit isolated communities in the campaign.

Mr. Keeping planned to hire a fishing boat for part of the campaign.

The Conservative said he would stress the need for a separate federal fisheries department.

The party and Newfoundland fishery interests have maintained that last year's inclusion of the fisheries department in the new environment department was detrimental to the industry.

FIGHTING WORDS

TORONTO (CP) — A Social Credit candidate in Greenwood riding for the Oct. 30 federal election is anxious for a campaign fight — literally.

George Leslie, who says he once was the Maritimes heavyweight boxing champion, would like to enter the ring against Jean Marchand, minister of regional economic expansion.

Leslie, who quoted the minister as having described Quebec Social Crediters as "psychiatric cases," said he sent Marchand a letter challenging him to a fist fight.

The letter said Marchand's comment "constitutes a foul, vicious and malicious insult and I demand satisfaction in the approved fashion of my honored Scottish forefathers."

New Mine Firms in B.C. 51% Canadian Soon?

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Any mining company starting a new venture in British Columbia will have to be at least 51% Canadian-owned, Mines Minister Leo Nimsick told The Times Tuesday.

Today Nimsick said this would be government policy in the future, but in the meantime the present system will continue. He said he could not give a timetable for implementation of the new policy as it had to be discussed in cabinet.

Existing companies need not fear any immediate move by the provincial government to take them over, but the time will come when the provincial government will decide to assume at least 50 per cent of all mining companies. That day is far in the future.

And when that day does come, American or Japanese companies which started the B.C. operations will still be able to retain up to 49% of them.

Mines Minister Leo Nimsick this afternoon denied that he outlined new government policy on mining operations in B.C.

"I stated that the time will come when we will expect to have over 50 per cent control in British Columbia."

He said this is "right not now, a firm government policy.

"We hope to be able to bring this policy in with the co-operation of the mining companies. There is no doubt about it, this is a hopeful objective of this government that we will gradually control our own natural resources."

Today the new mining policy is:

—All new mining companies starting business in B.C. must be more than 50 per cent Canadian owned.

—The smelter which Cominco Ltd. hopes to build at Kimberley may still be built. If it can be proved to be a pollution-free operation, it may get the blessing of the provincial government. An announcement will come later.

—The smelter in the Cariboo proposed by a consortium of companies has not got a prayer. It is based on a tall stack dispersing sulphur dioxide fumes into the air and Nimsick said it could never be approved on that basis.

—The era of dividing the province up into clean air areas and dirty air zones is over. No mine venture will be permitted to start up anywhere in the province if it contributes to pollution. "The whole province has become a clean air zone," he said.

—The mining companies operating in B.C. have been invited to submit proposals to Nimsick on how a system of royalties may be devised to give the provincial treasury a share in non-renewable resources exported from B.C.

"The era of the free ride is over in this province. In the past, the ore has been taken out of the ground with no thought of future generations," he said.

"Now we must plan the depletion of our non-renewable resources with an eye to the future.

"We must change the thinking of mining men in this province. Mining is a one-shot resource. Even trees can be replanted but you can not replace ore once it has been mined."

Without planning, he said, many mining towns in the province could join the ranks of ghost towns where companies have moved in, taken the cream and left.

The two new priorities in mining are to see that it produces as many jobs as possible and that there is a reasonable return to the people of the province in the form of royalties.

—He said the Kootenay and Elk Railway can forget any plans it had to export coal from British Columbia through the United States rather than using Canadian lines to Roberts Bank.

B.C. LOTTERY . . . IN TIME

Premier Barrett indicated Tuesday night his government will go ahead with plans for a provincial lottery system, when it has the time.

Barrett, speaking on a New Westminster radio program, said the lottery will be introduced "as soon as we can have a good go."

"But we've got an awful lot of legislation on our plate at this point . . . I don't want to give a specific date and disappoint anybody," he said.

Last week Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said B.C. is in the process of studying the lottery systems in operation in some of the Prairie provinces and was considering instituting one in this province.

PM Promises Recreation 'Goodies'

Times News Services

SHAWINIGAN, Que. — Prime Minister Truudeau promised Canadians Tuesday a leisure and recreation program "that will leave you breathless."

He gave no details of the program but said the Liberal government would have "goodies — candies — to announce in the next week or two, certainly before Oct. 30."

He said, "I guarantee that it will leave you breathless."

Trudeau was speaking at a Liberal party meeting which renominated Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chetien in the Oct. 30 federal election.

Trudeau made one other stop during the first day of his current low-key, two-day tour of the province, appearing on an open-line radio show in Trois-Rivieres, where he reaffirmed his belief in the abolition of capital punishment and said he would probably vote to continue the ban against hanging when the matter comes up in the Commons later this year.

While Trudeau concentrated on Quebec voters, Conservative leader Robert Stanfied is in Toronto where he pledged Tuesday that a Conservative government would offer tax incentives to individuals investing in risky Canadian corporations.

Stanfield disclosed for the first time on a television interview this aspect of his party's program for increasing Canadian investment in Canadian enterprises.

He was discussing the problem of foreign ownership of Canadian companies and what incentives should be offered to small businessmen similar to those now offered large corporations in Canada.

"I don't see why we can't give some tax credits, for example, up to a certain amount a year for money that's invested in risk situations," the Conservative leader declared.

"I think this could develop quite a pool of venture capital which would be available for small businessmen," he added.

Principals' Power Urged

A management consultant's report released today says the bureaucracy of Greater Victoria School Board is not overstaffed but it recommends streamlining the operation and giving more responsibility in finance and hiring to principals.

School board chairman Allan McKinnon said the board had given the go-ahead for the recommended job rescheduling and had referred other recommendations for consideration.

McKinnon noted that although he had been voted to office on a platform of reducing school board bureaucracy, staff reductions necessitated by financial constraints and effected more than a year before the report was commissioned had cut some 22 positions in the administration, with an annual reduction in direct salaries of $250,000.

He said the administrative streamlining would not reduce school costs.

The $13,500 report, drawn up by Price, Waterhouse Associates of Vancouver, created a set of new jobs and job descriptions for most board executives.

One of the major changes relieves the secretary-treasurer of his business responsibilities and creates a director of business.

School construction and maintenance will be handled by a director of school support and instruction will be divided betwen an administration and a curriculum chief.

Under a system of "responsibility accounting," which would extend throughout the senior levels, school principals would be made responsible for information and maintenance of their own school budgets.

Norman Alban, spokesman for Price, Waterhouse, said responsibility accounting was "a method of informing those responsible for various operations."

Since schools account for 90 per cent of the board's $26 million annual budget this means the principal will be made responsible for setting school budgets, he said.

McKinnon said a closed board meeting Tuesday night balked at the report's suggestion that pay of the top 20 officials should be scaled and defined.

Bullets Miss Ulster's Craig

BELFAST (UPI) — A man and a woman in a speeding car fired three shots today at a car carrying William Craig, leader of Northern Ireland's militant right-wing Ulster Vanguard Movement, in an apparent assassination attempt. He escaped injury but said he was badly shaken.

Two other men were found shot to death in apparently motiveless murders by what police called "back street assassins" and a bomb exploded outside a crowded bar in a Roman Catholic sector of Belfast, wounding 30 persons. The two murdered men were the 66th and 67th victims of the gang believed to kill for thrills.

The shaken Craig told police he was driving on a small country lane near Lisburn, eight miles south of Belfast, when a car behind him sped up to pass. The dark car, driven by a man with a woman in the passenger's seat, pulled level.

Then, Craig said, a gun was pushed through the window and opened fire. Craig swerved and stopped. The attackers' car sped away.

Craig told newsmen in Lisburn's police station that the first two shots did not fully register with him.

"It was only on the last shot that I was conscious that the shooting was at me," he said. "It was only confirmed a short distance up the road when I saw the bullet holes."

Police Losing Drug Battle

VANCOUVER (CP) — City police said Tuesday that while there are more drug arrests than ever before, the police are fighting a losing battle against the illicit drug trade in Vancouver.

They warned that more and more pot smokers are moving up the ladder through LSD, MDA and other soft drugs to heroin.

Figures just released show that in the first nine months of 1971 there were 258 heroin possession charges and 93 trafficking charges.

In the corresponding period for 1972, 617 persons were charged with possession of heroin and 151 with trafficking.

An average of 50 persons appears each day in provincial court on charges ranging from possession of drugs to trafficking. The report says a few years ago one provincial court session a week was held to handle the handful of drug cases.

Police officers point to the judicial system as a key culprit. They attack the new bail reform system and complain that the courts are handing out lenient sentences.

"We can't keep the drug pedlars off the streets," complained one officer. "No sooner do we bring them in than they are released."

In the past two months, a special squad of eight officers has been concentrating on soft drug enforcement to free veteran drug squad police to crack down on the heroin trade.

Canadian, U.S. Drug Prices 'The Highest'

By DAVE ABLETT
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Giant pharmaceutical companies are charging U.S. and Canadian druggists three and four times as much as druggists elsewhere for the same amount of the same drug.

The huge differences are revealed in a nine-country survey of 20 widely used drugs, including antibiotics, contraceptives, antihistamines and tranquillizers.

The druggists' cost is a major factor in the price eventually paid by someone who walks into a drugstore with a prescription.

According to the survey, Swedish druggists, for example, mark up their pharmaceuticals an average of 45.3 per cent.

The survey, inserted in the U.S. Congressional Record by Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin to support a drug-price control bill, was prepared by two U.S. government researchers, Edmond Jacoby and Dennis Hefner.

Jacoby and Hefner concluded cautiously that the drug price differences between various contries are "significant."

Some of the differences they said, may be due to labor costs, market size and other economic factors.

But they added: "General knowledge of the total problem suggests that it would be unwise to assume that price discrimination exercised by drug producers is a minor factor."

The survey was based on price lists from 1968, 1969 and 1970 — just as a worldwide inflationary surge was beginning.

To get a proper comparison, Jacoby and Hefner put everything in terms of the U.S. dollar price for 100 tablets or capsules of the 20 drugs.

The same company or a licensee sells each drug in the nine countries.

The 20 drugs were chosen on the basis of importance in the U.S. drug markets — all were among the 50 most prescribed drugs in the U.S.

While the survey was mainly aimed at showing the high prices U.S. druggists paid, the survey also showed that Candian druggists — and as a result Canadian consumers — were not much better off.

Among the more striking findings about costs to Canadian druggists:

Canadian druggists paid $10.69 to Ely Lilly company for V-Cillin-K, an antibiotic. Lilly sold the same amount to British druggists for $2.40 under the same brand name.

Canadian druggists paid $3.06 to Hoffman-Laroche for Gantrisin, a sulfonamide. The New Zealand price, the lowest among the nine countries, was $1.11.

Canadian druggists paid $5.29 to Lilly for an analgesic, Propoxyphene HCL, sold in Canada as Darvon.

New Zealand druggists paid $1.66 for the same analgesic, known there as Doloxene.

Canadian druggists' costs on another antibiotic, demethylchlortetracycline HCL, sold by Lederle as Declomycin, was $16.00.

In New Zealand, the Lederle price for Ledermycin — the same thing — was $3.87.

In one of the 20 cases was the Canadian price among the lowest — in only one case was the Canadian price as low as fourth among the nine.

In 12 of the 20 cases, Canada had the second-highest price, usually after the United States, whose druggists paid the most in 12 out of 20 cases.

Canada had the highest price in three cases, and the third-highest in four cases.

Ireland, New Zealand and Britian had the lowest prices.

The high Canadian and U.S. prices were also reflected in the average price of the 20 drugs surveyed.

The average paid by the U.S. druggist was $9.68. Canadian druggists paid $8.71.

He said that "an amazing
